Cerritos College discusses buying property for student housing near campus.

Student housing underway

Property on Barnwall St. and Studebaker Rd. is being developed for what may be Cerritos College student housing. The townhomes are in possession of Barnwall Townhomes LLC and are being developed by Dennis Huddleston who has worked on the project for for the past five years.

General contractor and developer Huddleston said that the seven homes, which each have three bedrooms and three bathrooms, could house up to about 42 students.

He is also working with a non profit organization which would be “buying the property for [Cerritos] College.”

He said, “It is a property that my investors invested in and part of my investors work with [Cerritos] College a lot and so this is something we felt was close enough to the college that it would be good enough for students that can go there.”

Cerritos College President Jose Fierro said in between laughs that he could not confirm or deny that the property would be purchased for student housing.

Fierro said that the conversations on obtaining the property are still early and that they are looking for proper representation for the District on the transaction.

Some concerns with the acquisition of the property included the timeliness of buying property instead of investing it toward faculty and staff.

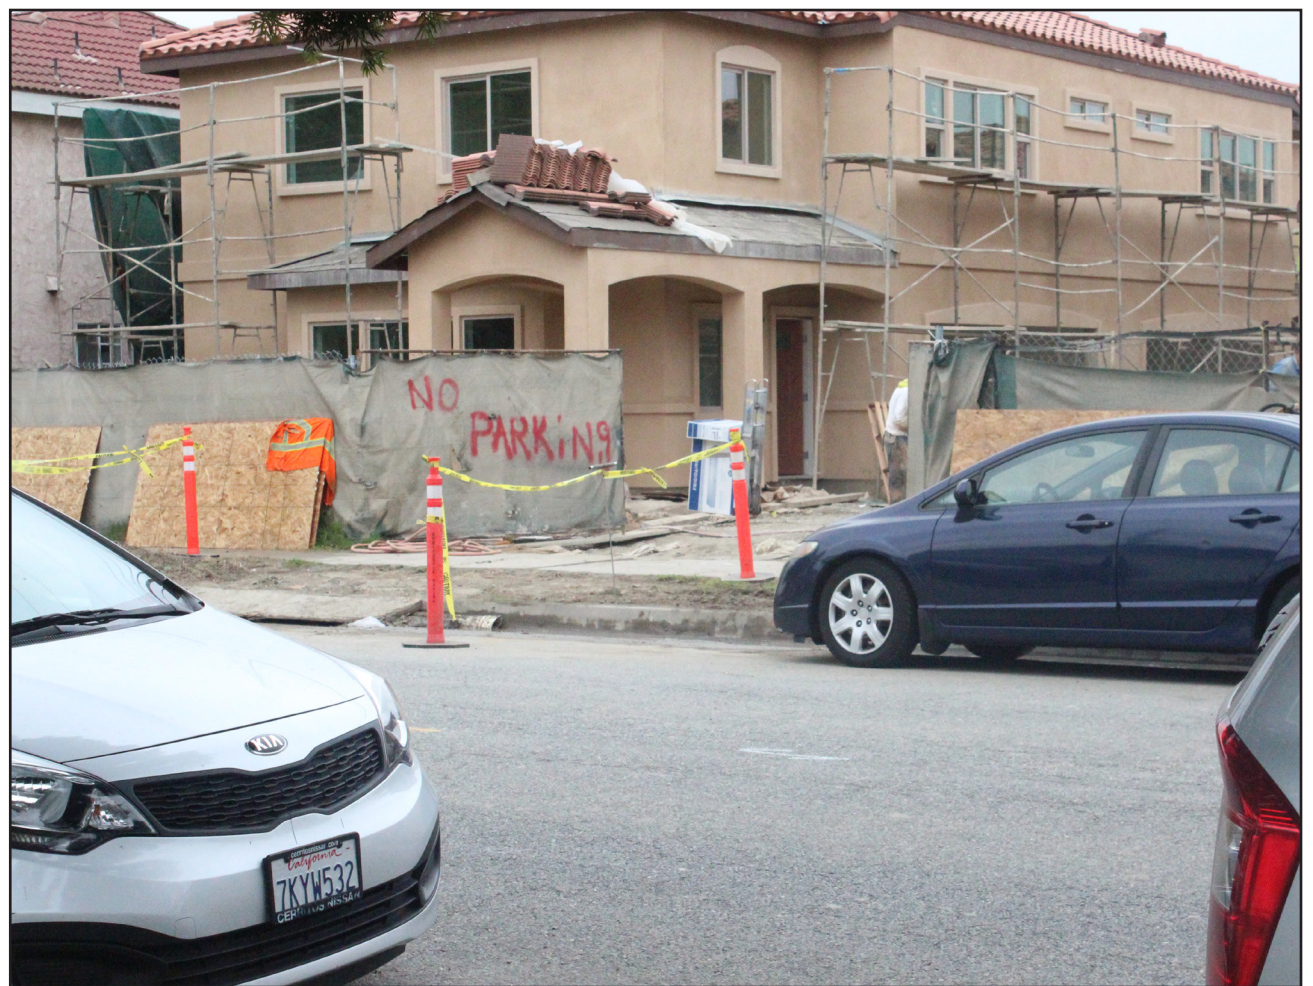

Fierro said that even though there is concern there, the District is restrained in how funds are allocated.

He said, “Our budget come from different places, so having money doesn’t necessarily mean that we have money to spend on salaries. Capital outlay can only be spent on facilities, renovations, updates, maintenance and so on. Our allocation of money comes earmarked for something specific and it is against the law for us to spend it on things that they were not intended for.”

Huddleston said of the possibility of the District purchasing the property, “All the upgrades that the college is doing right now; they’re putting so much money into it and this is a great opportunity for the college and for students that need a place to live and go to college.” it is a very good thing for students who need a place to live.”

Fierro concluded by saying that the topic has been in discussion among Board of Trustee members during the Board’s closed sessions, “It is very early still and yes there an interest and a very valid reason to buy and we are attempting to do that but the conversations are early and there are a number of variable that require the District to study its position to insure that we are doing the right thing.”

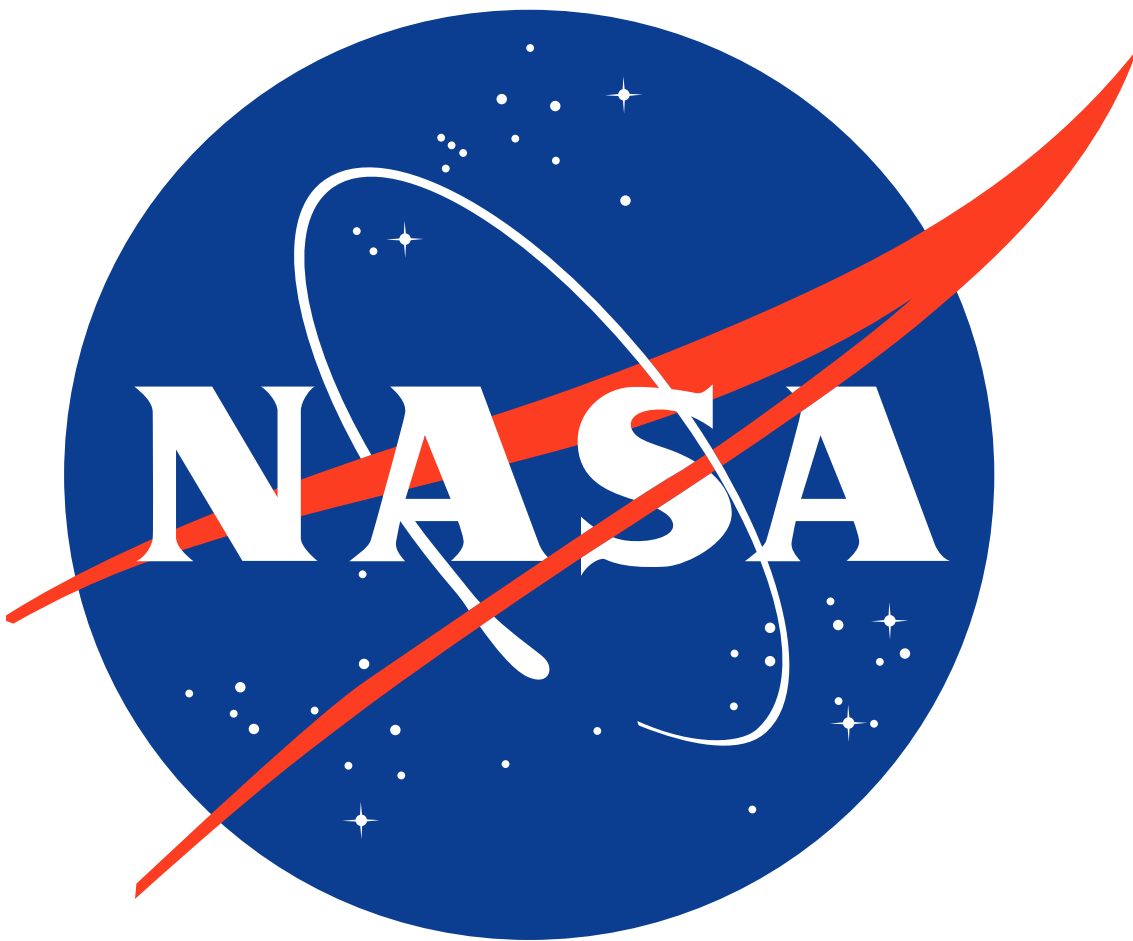

The property is still being actively worked on, but will be finished within a month according to Huddleston. He said he hopes the District goes ahead with the purchase “because if not these beautiful homes will just be sold off.”

Undocumented students can now apply for NCAS

The Associated Students of Cerritos College approved $5,000 for NASA Community College Aerospace Scholars on May 8, allowing undocumented students the opportunity to apply to a program otherwise only available for U.S. citizens.

Department chair of physics, astronomy and engineering Janet McLarty-Schroeder said she first had to find out if NASA would allow for undocumented students to apply before acquiring funds.

McLarty-Schroeder said NASA allowed for it, so long as students wouldn't attend restricted aerospace companies, which in turn will restrict tour locations.

"For background screening purposes, it seems to be a problem for AB-540 [students]," McLarty-Schroeder emphasized, "That's okay, we can find other places that will give tours to non-citizens... but we have to be able to show up front that we have the money to cover everything they need to the same level as a citizen."

Lodging, equipment and food adds up to about $500 per student, which is covered by NASA, the Cerritos College Foundation and some funds from ASCC.

With the extra $5,000 acquired on top of the $4,500 approved for the fiscal year, only 10 undocumented students will be able to participate, as funds are still needed for instructional equipment--including the online course students must complete, giving them a chance to make it to the on-site location.

So far, 19 undocumented students have expressed interest in the program, leaving McLarty-Schroeder questioning how to decide which students are the most determined.

"I don't want it to be any different than the citizens because there's no GPA requirement," she said, "Who is going to stick with it and not give up when things get bad? Those are the hardest things to tell."

Micah Pratt, a mechanical engineer major and recent participant of NCAS, recommends that applicants "really commit" to the course, seeing it as "committing to your own future."

Pratt made it to the on-site location at Johnson Space Center and was also able to intern at NASA Ames Research Center in Palo Alto, doing work based on artificial intelligence.

Although the research strayed from his major, Pratt said, "I feel like NCAS kind of prepared me for that, too, because when you get there, you're not doing things that are strictly necessarily related to things you've done before."

Pratt said he was glad to hear McLarty-Schroeder and Carlos Mera, physics professor, were able to get funds from ASCC to support undocumented students interested in the program.

"There's no reason why anybody should be excluded from being able to really gain the full benefit of participating in the project," Pratt expressed.

Mera also expressed his appreciation to ASCC and thanked the students for the opportunity.

McLarty-Schroeder is excited for the next on-site location, wanting to keep it a surprise for applicants.

The deadline for citizen applications is May 15, but varies for undocumented students. Those who are interested are encouraged to contact McLarty-Schroeder.

TECH

Talks, Creates, Imagines

Bezos is in over his head with future plans

Christopher Martinez
Sports Editor
@chris_reports_

Amazon founder Jeff Bezos has a vision of what space can do for humanity. The last Tech Talks established that space is already full of human space junk and not sure what he thinks about humans having massive free-floating space stations housing millions of people off of the earth.

Bezos' space flight company Blue Origin, has unveiled the new blueprint to its space shuttle, Lunar Lander.

Bezos believes it could help initiate space travel and make progress toward humans reaching space habitation.

There are many different reasons why space inhabitation will not work at least not until we clean up the mess we have made so far.

If Bezos believes we can live in space, he's is a joke because we have not even learned how to live and preserve the earth we have now.

Currently scientists have calculated there is about 10.5 millions tons of plastic waste a year and an estimated 14 billion pounds of plastic is put into our oceans yearly.

Now if Bezos wants to talk about space travel and finding an alternate earth in the making, he should put that money into cleaning the planet we currently reside in.

Secondly, The junk in our space is rapidly growing with every space launch or satellite put into orbit. The question now is when will we run out of room?

As of right now there is dozens upon dozens of junk in space and if Bezos wants to just get it out of the atmosphere he will have to get past multiple rings of space junk that could essentially destroy the shuttles that he has created.

If Bezos can first clean our planet and our space junk then and only then should he start to make plans to live in space. Until then, we need to fix what we have before it becomes what we had.

Even president Trump and his administration has told NASA that they want people to start traveling to the moon.

Vice President Mike Pence has even gone as far as to challenge NASA to send the first women to the moon by 2024.

People and officials who do not working the field or have no substantial knowledge on space travel or astrophysics should not try and create alternate habitats for humanity or find a place for humanity to live without the knowledge of space itself.

Bezos's plan will undoubtedly never work after scientists have calculated that global warming will make it unlivable on earth and therefore will not give Bezos the time to create what he has planned.

If we do not change how we treat this planet we will not live to see it passed on and the world itself will end before our very eyes.

Casa Cubana: Cuban cuisine restaurant Don Francisco features a simple menu with sandwiches, pastries, coffee and has a reasonable pricing for great quality food.

Marilyn Parra

@marilynparra18

¡Hola Pancitas!

Coffee and Cuban food, two things that go perfectly together. Don Francisco's Coffee, Casa Cubana is a must when in LA.

The menu is simple, sandwiches, pastries, coffee and the pricing is reasonable for great quality food.

Located in the heart of LA on South, Spring Street, Don Francisco's is inside a mini food court, surrounded by many other great restaurants.

They open at 7 a.m. and close at 4 p.m. everyday. Take advantage of arriving early to enjoy the restaurants beautiful interior with a cup of cafe con leche.

After trying their coffee, Starbucks is out of the picture. It is the perfect mixture of sweet and strong served in a medium-sized cup.

Their classic Cubano sandwich is served with fried plantain chips and it the perfect portion size for lunch. It is fresh, warm and toasty, most cubano sandwiches have too much mustard, cheese or meat but Don Francisco's makes it perfect.

Not only do they serve lunch, they also serve breakfast. Some of their popular breakfast dishes will be the, "Df breakfast sandwich" served with chorizo, ham, cheese, garlic and onions in-between a buttered cuban bun.

Pork and plantain hash is also very filling and comes with pork, sweet plantains, potato, onion, and egg served on a cuban bun.

The interior and exterior are beautiful. Simplicity does go a long way, the doors are clear glass and the walls are all white with black tile. There really is a Spanish felt this mini-restaurant.

Towards the back there is a small lounge area with low chairs and a round coffee table making it the perfect place to study or read a book. One unexpected feature that was appreciated is the beautiful wallpaper with little Guacamaya birds inside the restroom.

They takes both cash and card, but it is highly recorded you bring cash to pay for parking since it is located in the middle of LA.

Don Francisco's Coffee, Casa Cubana is a great place to stop by and each breakfast and lunch, this place truly will make pansas llena and corazons contentos.

A large graphic banner for the Class of 2019 graduation. The background is light gray with a repeating pattern of smaller graduation caps. A large, black graduation cap is centered at the top. Below it, the word "Congratulations" is written in a large, elegant, black script font. Underneath that, the word "Graduates" is written in a very large, bold, black serif font. Below "Graduates", the words "CLASS OF 2019" are written in a bold, black, sans-serif font. To the right of "CLASS OF 2019" is a black silhouette of a rolled-up diploma tied with a ribbon. In the top right corner, there is a logo for "STUDENT AFFAIRS CERRITOS COLLEGE" with a graduation cap icon above the text. At the bottom of the banner, a black horizontal bar contains the text "From the Division of Student Affairs" in a white, cursive font.

Sir Robert Bryson Hall II, known professionally as Logic released his seventh studio album 'Confessions of a Dangerous Mind' which highlights the ups and downs as long as the struggles of being a rapper and dealing with all the problems that come along with it.

This Album has listeners bumping this album on repeat as it is a window into Logic's mind how he sees himself and his flaws and paints images of how he has battled his demons.

Logic throughout the album name drops many artists in the industry who he looks up to and helped him through the hard times.

He also has many features with artists he looks up to and admires throughout the album.

Many artists in the rap game have criticized Logic for rapping about how biracial he was and his struggle growing up in a section 8 household.

But he takes a stand in multiple songs saying it's what fuels his music and it made him who he is today.

Depression and anxiety is mentioned a lot throughout the album.

Logic mentions that if fans and internet trolls were to leave MC's alone that there would be less overdoses and suicides from artists.

Many artists use drugs and alcohol as a way to escape from the criticism of their craft that they work so hard to craft.

Logic brought up some touchy subjects and people who he had beefed with in the past such as Charlamagne tha God and how he had asked Logic in an interview back in 2014, who was the man that raped his sister and to Logic is a question that is too personal to ask.

'Adding Machine: A Musical' is timeless

SARAH PIRTLE

The theatre department presents "The Adding Machine": Among director Brandt Reiter, music was by Joshua Schmidt and David Betancourt. The musical took place on the weekend of May 11 and May 12, 2019.

Eunice Barron
Co-Online Editor
@barroneunice

The Associated Students at Cerritos College and the theater department presented a live musical of the 1923 adaptation drama of "The Adding Machine," and it was spectacular, well-produced and greatly choreographed.

This live adaptation felt too good for just a community college performance due to its spectacular theatrical presence and interaction with the audience.

It was highly entertaining and will leave anyone watching the show satisfied.

The entire production was professionally well done and felt more like a legit, mini Broadway musical.

Brandt Reiter, David Betancourt and the entire production cast did an amazing job on putting together the adaptation to life.

Reiter did a magnificent job on directing the show and respectively knew how to adapt the original story into a live production that felt so real as possible.

Betancourt did magnificent in directing the music and it went well with the theme of the musical.

All of the cast members were true to its characters as much as possible to the point that it felt realistic.

The vocals and portrayals of the characters left a huge impression to the audience of how much talent this show has.

It was well choreographed and felt relevant to the 1920s dance style.

The costumes and makeup were appropriate to the story's time setting.

"The Adding Machine" is a dark satirical examination of Capitalism in the early 20th century.

Mr. Zero, played by Hunter Ryti, is a middle-aged accountant and is "let go" from his job of 25 years.

While dealing with an intensive relationship with his wife, played by Marie Igano, and female assistant.

He kills his boss, played by Christopher Amador, and finds himself facing execution.

In the afterlife, after not finding true happiness, he discovers his true nature and has a second opportunity to become a better person.

The musical is a live adaptation of the 1923 expressionist drama of the same name by American playwright and Pulitzer Prize winner, Elmer Rice.

Bianca Bitches: Access to abortions

Bianca Martinez
Freelance Writer
@biancamart1955

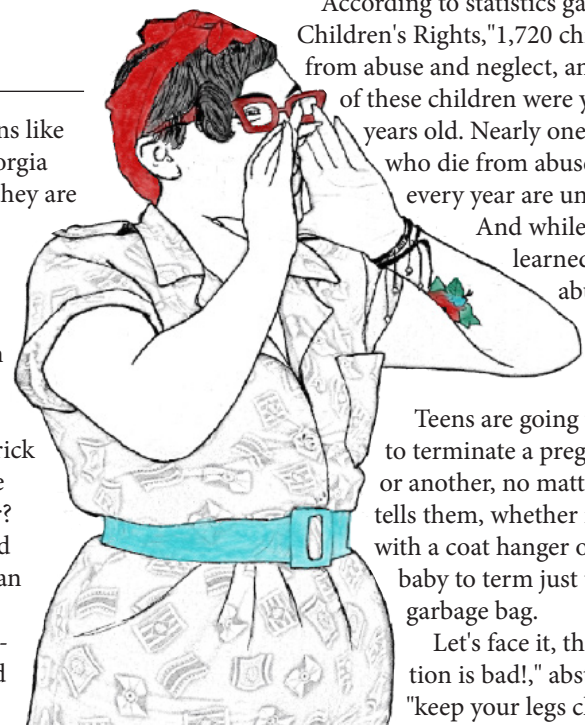

Heart beat laws and abortions bans like the one passed most recently in Georgia should never be allowed to pass as they are inhumane, not only for the women in need of the abortion but for the zygote, or in some cases, embryo, gestating within her body.

If life starts with a heartbeat, then why didn't those in favor of those laws exhibit the same amount of compassion for reform when Kendrick Castillos felt it necessary to sacrifice himself in front of an active shooter?

Or when Jakelin Caal Maquin and several other children have died in an immigration detention center?

Or how about when another newborn baby, with their umbilical cord still attached, is thrown away like goddamn trash because abortions are stigmatized?

Listen up, pro-lifers, you want people to carry their babies to term, you better be prepared to adopt said babies or push for reform to fix the dilapidated system that is foster care and Child Protective Services.

According to statistics gathered by Children's Rights, "1,720 children died from abuse and neglect, and 71.8 percent of these children were younger than 3 years old. Nearly one half of children who die from abuse and neglect every year are under a year old."

And while I'm getting you learned up about child abuse statistics, let me tell you why those stats are so high.

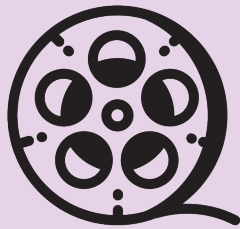

Teens are going to find a way to terminate a pregnancy one way or another, no matter what society tells them, whether it's being done with a coat hanger or carrying the baby to term just to stuff it in a garbage bag.

Let's face it, that whole "abortion is bad!", "abstinence and 'keep your legs closed' approach has never worked in the entire history of human existence.

If they want to have sex they'll have anyways, that's how it works with everything, folks.

So instead of stigmatizing abortion, let people know that it's an option.

Ladies don't WHINE, drink WINE with their own personal problems.

"Wine County," reunites the women of Saturday Night Live. From Tina Fey to Paula Pell and Emily Spivey, be ready to laugh at the random crap life throws at these ladies.

Some scenes can be a bit corny when watching these older ladies talk about current pop culture trends but expect Poehler to throw in jokes about millennials.

The story itself is a bit bland but you can tell these ladies have great chemistry on and off screen proving their real-life friendship.

Big fans of these ladies would enjoy the movie, but if you're a normal viewer, the movie can be slow.

One appreciated factor this movie has is the many jokes in each and every scene. Most jokes are heartfelt ones making this movie relatable to the women watching.

What makes this movie relatable to all women at home is the topics discussed throughout the film that bring the six friends closer.

Rebecca played by actress, Rachel Dratch is turning 50 years old and has not accepted her age and is in denial about her bad marriage with her douchebag husband.

In the end, she comes to her sense and accepts her age and horrible marriage with the help of her friends.

Poehler plays Abby, who loves to take control and plan out her life by the minute. Her OCD gets in the way of everyone's fun and is annoying to watch. For a character that has no children, she does act as an organized mom.

Maya Rudolph plays Naomi, a character who is scared to accept death and does not have the courage to call her doctor back her for BRCA test results. Rudolph really embodies her character well, making viewers feel for her character.

Ana Gasteyer plays Catherine, a workaholic that struggles to balance friendship and work. Out of all the girls, Catherine has the biggest character development and it's quite exciting to see.

Pell places store owner Val, a lesbian who has trouble finding someone to love in her age range. She is the jokester of the group and kindest.

Porn-dogs need to leave children alone

Pornhub's performative "wokeness" with saving the bees, planting trees or whatever the fuck and possibly buying Tumblr, won't stop twisted fucks from engaging in and posting child pornography and exploiting sex workers.

It should be a universal understanding, to porn enthusiasts and haters alike, that children must be protected from the dangers of early exposure to pornographic content, especially when the internet can be a free-for-all.

After Apple noticed child pornography on Tumblr, the company took it upon themselves to remove the app from the Apple store and in December 2018, Tumblr banned all adult content showcasing genitalia and sexual activity.

Nevermind that folks on Tumblr had already brought up the issue of child pornography on the website before the ban or deletion of the app took place.

According to BuzzFeed News, Pornhub's Vice President, said not only is the company extremely interested in buying Tumblr, but also looks forward to "restoring it to its former glory of NSFW content."

Cue a dead look in the eyes.

Pornhub is giving itself too much credit when it and parent company MindGeek have been known for cases of revenge porn and "widespread piracy of porn films" that make it difficult for sex workers to earn a living, as stated by Tech Crunch.

Regardless of the stigma against sex workers, they deserve what they are owed.

Let's be real, Tumblr was a godsend for those looking to get their porn fix, which, okay, people are entitled to do whatever they please in their free time.

No one is going to come knocking on your chamber door, policing you for watching porn or jacking off to incest and violence against women, however disturbing that is.

Before the NSFW ban, it was the norm to see a big, whopping penis on your dashboard at 7 a.m. and not be too phased.

As adults, it's your problem if you're exposed to enough porn to be jaded, but that shouldn't be the case for a 13-year-old Tumblr user.

Who's to say Pornhub buying Tumblr won't bring back the problems it was trying to get rid of in the first place?

It is important to question what policies, or lack thereof, Pornhub will put in place.

If the company does end up buying Tumblr, it comes down to adults' due diligence in reporting child pornography if they ever come across it and doing research on how this will affect sex workers.

Also, if you're a grown ass adult following 13-year-olds and posting porn, you're just a straight-up creep and need to not be in the near vicinity of any child.

Art depicting sexual activity and nudity, however, is usually well protected under the First Amendment.

Artists on Tumblr who specialized in eroticism took a hit and lost their platform, restricting their freedom of expression.

Are we going to ban and cancel Venus de Milo for it's "female-presenting nipples?" I think not.

Just get rid of the child porn, for fuck's sake.

Cerritos College running back

Rhamondre Stevenson became a Falcon and ran over 2,000 yards, now he's becoming an Oklahoma Sooner preparing for a new journey.

There are not many running backs coming out of a community college that can break their schools rushing record with 2,111 yards in a season, become the nation's number one leading rusher and can leave their school by becoming the sixth player all time to do so.

Oklahoma Sooner commit, Rhamondre Stevenson, did that all in just one season at Cerritos College.

Rhamondre Stevenson, a running back out of Centennial High School in Las Vegas, Nevada, decided to move to California and play his first two years of college at Cerritos.

Stevenson chose this route due to that he was a non qualifier coming out of high school which left him with only one option and that was attending a community college.

This was the only route Rhamondre could take if he wanted to play at the next level.

"I've seen a history of guys from Cerritos who made it to the Division 1 level and that motivated me to believe that I can too."

"I've seen a history of guys from Cerritos who made it to the division 1 level and that motivated me to believe that I can too," Stevenson said.

Cerritos College football head coach Dean Grosfeld, saw the potential Stevenson possessed coming out of high school and automatically knew Rhamondre was the type of running back he wanted on his offense.

"We knew all along that as soon as he [Stevenson] got in shape, he would be the type of running back that he was."

Throughout his sophomore season as Stevenson hurdled and ran defenders over, Stevenson became that running back as he averaged 9.5 yards per carry while scoring 16 touchdowns.

Coach Grosfeld shared what it was like to coach Stevenson his first year as head coach.

"Awesome human being, great kid, good work ethic, he's a special talent but also a special kid."

Coach Grosfeld added on by saying how Rhamondre is a better kid off the field than he is on the field.

"He's just a great kid, very respectful, very appreciative, hard working. He does the right thing, he's not a kid that uses alcohol or drugs, he doesn't do any of that stuff."

Stevenson's special talent definitely showed when he broke the school's single game rushing record against Long Beach City community college and the single season rushing record against Golden West community college which put him over the 2,000 rushing yard mark.

Stevenson expressed how blessed he feels to have his name in the record books

"Breaking records at Cerritos was an unbelievable feeling because knowing how hard me and my team worked the whole time we were together, it was showing in big ways."

Carl Odom, who played backup to Rhamondre, reflected on how watching Stevenson play made him a better running back.

"Watching him definitely made me a better player. I learned more about the position as a whole and how he would put the team on his back at times taught me a lot as well."

One game Stevenson will forever remember as a Falcon will be the last game of the season against Golden West.

Stevenson described that night as "unforgettable."

"It was my last night with my JUCO brothers and coaches and we ended on a great win," Stevenson said.

Odom, who looked up to Rhamondre, described his relationship with him throughout the season.

"It was an honor, that's big bro to me."

Out of all the offers Stevenson had, Oklahoma set itself apart from all others.

Stevenson described his visit to Oklahoma as the icing on the cake for him.

"The family atmosphere there was unbelievable. From the coaches, players, fans and faculty, the history and success of OU can't be overlooked, especially as a running back."

Coach Grosfeld explained how excited all the coaches including himself will be to see Rhamondre play on tv despite coaching games on saturday as well.

"It'll all be hard for us but we'll make sure we're all taping the games and we'll support him like crazy. He's going to do a great job."

Stevenson said, "What I will remember most about playing at Cerritos is all my brothers on the team, as well as every single one of the coaches on the staff." He said they pushed him every day and his teammates are a big part of his success.
