Coming home...
clouded or shrouded

Although the war has been over now for years, they are still transporting the bodies home...

Will we ever be able to truly say "home is the sailor, home from the sea, and the hunter home from the hill?"

Vietnam, a topic of great controversy, can be described as a bloody, sanguinary, senseless battle.

Dulce et decorum est...

As a nation we set aside a "Veterans Day" to honor and remember those who did their duty, so to speak, and returned to their country — and those who did not — bearing the wounds of body and mind that have become the subject of abundant literary, music, and film coverage.

But the debauchery and affliction suffered as a result of the Vietnam war, no matter how much we have seen it, is never commonplace.

And although many soldiers had similar experiences there, it is never the "same old story."

Dulce et decorum est...

It is perhaps simple for some of us today to pass over the terror of the ones who participated. Unless we have parents or acquaintances who have related their horror to us — unless we have seen our brother re-witness in sleep each night the death of his best friend — it may not touch us with the impact that the situation warrants.

Awareness is everything.

And it does not logically follow in this case that just because a soldier now resides in his country he has come home.

How many of our "boys" left their sanity in a pit amidst raging, sickening, fire?

How many still get the rudely curious stares of passers-by because of their physical deformities?

Dulce et decorum est...

Sure, adjustments have been made. Many have found once again their niche in society. They have the support of their families.

It is by these we are sadly inspired.

But for many, so many, the nightmare hasn't ended.

Nor will it.

These are the ones who have returned physically, but not mentally.

It is for these we grieve.

And not to forget the prisoners of war who yet remain. Families exist in a state of resigned hopelessness.

But they never forget.

It is for these we should pray.

And finally those who died there. Some of whose bodies are still being shipped overseas, shrouded in the honor of what some term a dishonorable war...

It was a mandatory service.

A hateful service.

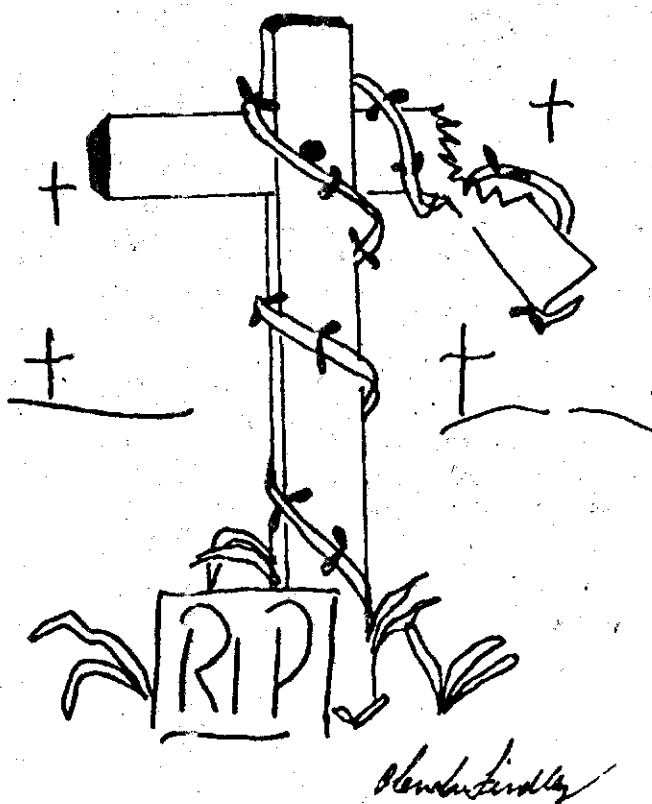

A reaper-grim service.

It is for these we mourn.

As poet Wilfred Owen states in his poem "Dulce Et Decorum Est":

*...If in some smothering dreams, you too could pace
Behind the wagon that we flung him in,
And watch the white eyes writhing in his face,
his hanging face, like a devil's sick of sin,
If you could hear, at every jolt, the blood come gargling from the froth corrupted lungs
Bitter as the cud of vile, incurable sores on innocent tongues,*

"It is sweet and decorous to die for your country."

RECENT HEADLINES have announced the return of remains of veterans of the long ago Vietnam war...and there are those still missing — both here and abroad — forgotten except on special commemorative or newsworthy occasions...

*My friend you would not tell with such high zest to children ardent for some desperate glory,
The old lie: Dulce et decorum est
Pro patria mori.*

Translated: "It is sweet and decorous to die for your country."

Never was there such a lie.

For they tasted the bitter, and found no sweet.

EDITORIAL II

Bomb threat taken ever so lightly...

"I've planted a bomb..."

Words like these should be taken seriously, rousing the Campus Police into drill-like action aimed not only at determining the validity of the statement but at protecting the lives of the campus population as well.

Chief Mike Gobec and his officers were quick to arrive at the scene.

The Student Activities Office and the bookstore were evacuated in an orderly fashion.

However, students milled about outside the building, continuing to traverse the walkways. Some even made it to the top of the stairs before being turned away.

Campus police entered the building to search for a bomb without benefit of protective clothing.

No outside agencies were notified of the threat.

Gobec, when questioned as to why the area was not cordoned off, and why he had not called the sheriff's department, replied that in his 25 years of experience, only one bomb threat had been real.

He saw no reason to seal off the area or ask for outside help.

In this age of heightened terrorist activities, all threats should be taken seriously.

Who is to determine whether or not a threat is serious?

Although there are those who derive pleasure from the threat alone, there are others that follow through.

Unsuspecting students strolling alongside the building could have been injured or killed by flying glass and other debris if there actually had been a bomb.

Those inside searching for an explosive device would surely have been killed.

Incidents such as this should be handled with care.

The proper procedures should be followed.

If there is one time to go by the book, this is it.

One real incident in 25 years should tell Chief Gobec what many of the bystanders were thinking — you never know.

Sunday driver scores high in "off the road" vehicle

By KIMBERLY GARCIA

I am a Sunday driver.

I didn't intend to be. I took Driver's Education in high school and got As. I had some of the highest scores on the simulator. And I was the most courageous (read: gutsiest) student driver in my field practice group.

And yet I failed my practical driving test twice.

I am the driver you spend ten minutes chewing out for cutting you off.

It's not my fault. I don't enjoy taking Mr. Toad's Wild Ride every time I sit behind the wheel.

And I will not mention the rather pale complexions of my passengers, or the fact that they refuse to eat before climbing into my car.

Million dollars would buy a lot of books

Dear Editor:

One million dollars — Where do we begin? As we look around our campus at Cerritos College each of us can find a worthy place for one million dollars. Maybe some paint here, a little landscaping there. Or, maybe a brand new Campus Police Vehicle complete with lights and siren.

Cerritos College does a wonderful job serving its students and community. But, is there a way Cerritos College can better help its students? I believe there is a way not only to help us students but to improve morale, understanding and cooperation on our campus.

Why did I decide not to take that art class? No, not because it meets at 8 a.m. Not because of what I heard about the professor, and not because of the term project. I decided not to take that art class because of the price of the book.

If you haven't already, everyone from the President on down should tour the Bookstore. Take a random survey, pick up two or three books and check out the prices. Now, imagine being a full time student. Imagine having to buy four, five or more of these books. If this education doesn't open your eyes, just ask for the Bookstore's buy-back prices on these same books.

One million dollars — where do we begin? Well, we can begin by helping students with the cost of our books. Put some of the one million dollars into a program for this type of help. This help can be given on financial need or based on academics. Yes, this would involve more people hours and more paperwork. But will it be worth the extra effort to better serve the students at Cerritos College?

In one man's opinion, yes.

David E. Madrid

Something just doesn't connect from my brain to my hands and feet. I know what to do — I missed only one question on the written exam — but I just can't seem to do it right.

It's not that I don't have experience behind the wheel. I don't only drive on Sunday. I've driven every day of the week, every hour of the day, through every imaginable weather (for Southern California). Even so, I still can't drive.

Now, to be fair, maybe I don't have the world's fastest reflexes. Maybe I spend too much time listening to my cassette player. Maybe I — and don't tell any Highway Patrolman this — daydream while I drive. But I know others who have or do these same things, and they can drive. Fast, maybe, but still...

At least I don't get speeding tickets. I don't have to worry about driving too much either: my friends almost always offer to drive me around. And I don't get too many people asking me for a ride.

And, just in case you're wondering, I've only been in two accidents: one in which I was hit by a drunk driver, and one in a parking lot.

Now, about my Vespa scooter...

Tami Jenson crowned at Homecoming festivities

By LAURA MENDOZA
TM Features Editor

Brilliance, eloquence, and anticipation reigned over the traditional Homecoming game as Tami Jenson, sponsored by Sigma Phi was crowned Homecoming Queen, while Cerritos Falcons dominated Fullerton on the gridiron, 28-19.

"Movie Classics" became reality as organizations displayed their creativity and hard work in the annual parade of floats.

Earlier in the day at the Judges luncheon Richard McGrath had mentioned, "You ain't seen nothing yet, until you've seen the parade of floats."

This proved to be true as the Filipino Club received the coveted Amy Dozier award for their rendition of The Never Ending Classics of Walt Disney.

The Presidents award went to Sigma Phi for Maltese Falcon, while LDSSA's

African Queen received the ASCC trophy.

The Queen's trophy went to Movie Greats, by SNACC, and Lambda Alpha Epsilon received the Alumni Trophy for their representation of 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea.

Theatre Arts Society captured the Board of Trustees award for Captain Blood, while King Kong, by Phi Kappa Zeta got the Faculty award.

2001, A Space Odyssey by Omega Pi Lambda was awarded the Foundation award, and Delta Phi Omega's Ding Dong the Witch is Dead received the Golden Falcon trophy.

The Ten Commandments by Campus Crusade for Christ received the Dr. Burnight award.

The CSEA trophy went to Mu Omega Alpha for M.A.S.H., and Water Polo received the Coaches award for Jaws. The Bench trophy went to Upsilon Omicron for their presentation of Miracle on 34th Street.

However, Homecoming would not have been so spectacular without previous events that helped stir interest in Homecoming festivities.

For example, take campaigning. Each girl, and supporting organizations, worked hard to show their enthusiasm and spirit in preparing for the "big" day.

The candidates showed camaraderie and concern when one was not able to campaign due to illness. Madeline Rabin and Micalanne Pederson voluntarily lent helping hands.

Court Introductions brought the reality of a Homecoming Queen closer as candidates embarked on a full-fledged campaign trail.

Instead of campaigning one for one, the candidates could often be seen campaigning together.

Then there was the annual Mock Rally, where Keith Estabrook captivated the audience as he was crowned Queen for his imitation of Queen candidate Tami Jenson. The rally proved to be just as entertaining as those in the past. However, there were comments suggesting that the rally was not the same without the lip-synch contest.

Last minute preparations had those involved scurrying around hoping that everything would come together as the hour of coronation came closer.

Everything did come together and fell into place as an array of fireworks, balloons, floats, and crowd participation filled the stadium with the Homecoming spirit to which everyone had been looking forward.

And now it's time to look forward to next year's Homecoming.

Bomb threat disrupts Senate; search proves caller a hoax

It's business as usual for the student senate today, after a phony bomb threat forced the evacuation of the student activities/bookstore complex, and the cancellation of the senate meeting last week.

The fraudulent threat came by telephone just before the start of the 2 p.m. meeting. Dean of Student Activities Phil Houseman immediately asked the assembled senators to leave, then cleared the rest of the building. Bookstore director Alan Beaulieu did the same in the bookstore. (The bookstore and student activities offices share a common wall).

The evacuation lasted for approximately 1½ hours as campus police conducted a search of the premises.

According to Houseman, the caller asked for him by name. "He said that he was a music instructor from another college, and that he could get in trouble for telling me, but that there was a bomb that would go off at the college," said Houseman. "I asked him where, and he said 'student activities', and that it was set to go off between 2 and 3 p.m."

Student activities secretary Toni Grijalva called the campus police, who arrived within minutes and secured the area.

Chief Mike Gobec and officer John Clark then searched the building, but turned up nothing. Gobec, who was trained in bombing matters by the Colusa County Sheriff's Office, waited until after 3 p.m., then searched the building a second time with officers Cary Jamison and Neil Morgan. They reopened the building for business around 3:30 p.m.

"It's just an inconvenience at an educational institution to have to take time away from class and business for some two-bit prankster," said Gobec. "We have some suspects and we're following leads."

No arrests have been made in the case.

Food Services student wins trip to Hawaii in convention drawing

By KENNY O'LEARY
TM Staff Writer

Loretta Cruz, a re-entry student in the Food Services Program, was the winner of a vacation for two to Hawaii in a drawing sponsored by Sysco Foods.

Cruz attended a seminar at the Grand Hotel in Anaheim on Oct. 21 as part of the Food Services Department. The students, led by Instructor Rudy Rozier, attended the seminar to gain knowledge on new products as well as profitable items that would help to get a business off the ground.

The vacation to Hawaii was one of several prizes offered in drawings by the various companies represented at the seminar.

Cruz, who has one more semester to complete before earning her certificate in Professional Baking, said her husband Alfred will make the trip to Hawaii with her.

Music prof gets a charge out of electronic music

By MONICA MERTZ
TM Staff Writer

From keeping the beat for Stevie Nicks in a garage band before she rose to fame with Fleetwood Mac to earning a PhD in Music Theory Composition, David Nelson's life has always been tuned in to music.

Some eleven weeks ago Nelson began teaching a variety of classes such as Music Theory, Synthesizer, and Beginning Piano and Guitar.

Having a fondness for electronics, Nelson has already requested a new synthesizer and drum machine, due to arrive this week. He's hoping to see the Music Department get a piano synthesizer this spring.

"I'd like to enhance the electronics in music at Cerritos," says Nelson. "I think electronics will attract more students to song writing."

Nelson uses his own music in classes like Classical Guitar and Guitar Ensemble, and says the students will always experience new pieces because he has a "drawer full of music" that he has composed.

Among his compositions are arrangements requiring 150 voices.

Along with his interest in choral music he states, "I enjoy all kinds of music: orchestral, chamber music, Renaissance, and 20th-century types."

Nelson also plays the violin.

Although he isn't a member of any one group, Nelson enjoys performing with various western bands on the weekends. While attending Arcadia High School, he performed in a band which featured Stevie Nicks.

While continuing his education at Humboldt State, the University of Oregon, and University of Santa Barbara, where he earned his masters and Ph.D., Nelson continued to play in folk, rock and guitar groups.

Nelson previously taught music at Sonoma State.

There is room in his life for more than music. Nelson and his wife are avid skiers and even the summer months don't put a stop to their enjoyment of the sport.

They traveled to New Zealand this summer to take part in a sport known as "helicopter skiing." This sport requires being dropped at the top of a slope by a helicopter and making it down on your own.

Nelson particularly enjoyed the country's scenery, and describes the panorama as having "beautiful glaciers and blue ice."

Due to the birth of their now 19-month-old daughter, Nelson and his wife have curbed their skiing this season.

In addition to his other hobbies, Nelson also enjoys backpacking — especially the three-day "Alpine Touring" style he has done around the west coast.

Whether he's engaged in downhill skiing or upbeat music, Nelson seems to live his life in "perfect harmony."

Part-time dental program offered

By SUSAN PHILLIPS
TM Editor-in-Chief

Each weekend, local papers run at least 75 ads advertising the need for Registered Dental Assistants — someone who not only assists the dentist, but performs a variety of procedures on the patient.

The Cerritos College Dental Assisting Program is doing something to try to fill that need.

Beginning with the Spring Semester, the program will offer two beginning classes — Dental Assisting 51 and 53 — aimed at reaching those who cannot attend full-time.

Dental Assisting 51 (Applied Dental Science I) will be offered on Monday with a Wednesday lab from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Introduction to Chairside Assisting (DA 53) will be offered Tuesdays from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. with a Thursday lab from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m.

The Cerritos program provides immediate licensing opportunities at the completion of the program, fulfills the requirements for certification in CPR and x-ray Radiology and provides job placement upon graduation.

A Registered Dental Assistant earns approximately $8 per hour at the entry level, eventually earning upwards of $12 hourly with experience.

For more information on how to get started in the program, contact the Cerritos College Health Occupations Office at (213) 860-2451, ext. 553.

No school, no T.M. on Vets Day holiday

Classes will be suspended at Cerritos College Monday, Nov. 10 in observance of Veterans Day. Classes will resume Tuesday.

There will be no Talon Marks on Nov. 12. The next issue will be on the stands Nov. 19.

NEW MUSIC PROF — Dr. David Nelson, who joined faculty this fall, is expert in electronic music.

'Something Wild' plot full of twists and turns

By DENISE GUILLEN
TM Staff Writer

You'll have to hold on to your seats when you see Orion Picture's latest production, Something Wild.

This comedy-thriller has more twists and turns than Mr. Toad's Wild Ride, and at times, it too seems like something out of Fantasy Land.

Jeff Daniels and Melanie Griffith star as two of the most unlikely characters to be thrown together.

You may remember Jeff Daniels as Debra Winger's cheating husband in Terms of Endearment. This time Daniels plays the role of Charles Duggs, a young, conservative vice-president of a Manhattan tax firm who sports around in a station wagon, dons "banker blue" suits, and insists on wearing his t-shirt to bed.

Griffith, as Lulu Hantel, is a hip, impulsive, uninhibited beauty who carries handcuffs in her purse and a ready bottle of scotch in her car.

The two encounter each other in a New York City diner when Lulu spots Charlie trying to run out without paying his tab.

Despite his establishment appearance,

Lulu pegs him as a "closet rebel" and offers him a ride back to his office.

The ride turns into a three day madcap adventure to Pennsylvania. On the road, Charlie learns how to break loose and channel that "closet rebel" energy.

Lulu shows him the shadier side of life and he finds himself the unlikely accomplice in a liquor store robbery, then chained to a bed in a sleazy motel and terrorized by a crazed psychopath whom he meets at Lulu's ten-year class reunion.

Sound confusing? It is.

The movie tears along at a fast pace and takes so many sharp turns that it almost crosses the lines of believability, losing some credibility.

Most of the laughs are bona fide, a few are predictable and, fortunately, only a couple reach.

Casting, however, is the one strong point.

Griffith and Daniels are perfect choices for the high-energy characters and, together they project an abundance of screen chemistry.

In fact, the two help give the film the extra added punch it lacks on its own.

Also, newcomer Ray Liotta gives a hauntingly realistic performance as the dark character of Ray Sinclair. Liotta commands a powerful presence portraying an explosive ex-con just freed from jail and trying to reclaim his wife.

The story eventually escalates into violence which will probably catch most people off guard, considering that it starts out as a romance-comedy.

Actually, the whole movie is that way. It starts in one direction and then turns the opposite way.

If you feel like passing through Mr. Toad's Wild Ride but don't want to drive to Anaheim, you should probably see Something Wild instead.

Overall, Something Wild slides under the wire with a mild six.

College survey to determine community needs for classes

By SUSAN PHILLIPS
TM Editor-in-CHIEF

The Cerritos College Institutional Research and Development Office is conducting a comprehensive community needs assessment to determine the community's needs for classes and programs, their awareness of the college, and why people don't attend.

The survey also hopes to learn how to improve its recruitment and promotional activities to better reach into the district communities.

The survey is made by randomly selecting phone numbers from throughout the district. Calls are made during the week and on Saturdays during the day and evening.

Each person contacted will be asked 40 questions and the interview should take about 12 minutes.

Lonnie meets up with a coniving, slick agent named Manny (Alex Patino). With Manny's help Lonnie is launched into the public eye with a series of carefully planned

"Basically, it's an overall assessment of what the community knows about Cerritos College and what they need from us," said Jan Dennis-Rounds, Director of Institutional Research and Development.

Those contacted during the survey will not be asked to identify themselves and participation is voluntary. Survey questions were developed at the college as a cooperative effort by the many departments and committees seeking input of this sort.

The final report on the community needs assessment will be made available to the college community this spring.

The cities included in the survey are Artesia, Bellflower, Cerritos, Downey, Hawaiian Gardens, Lakewood, La Mirada and Norwalk.

SCHOOL RECORD RUN — Running back Andre Wooten explodes for a 91-yard touchdown run Saturday, breaking Cerritos record, as Falcons clip Fullerton Hornets 28-19 to stay one game behind leader Golden West.

FALCON FIREWORKS BURN FULLERTON 28-19

By JOHN WELSH
TM Sports Editor

Although Fullerton came out fighting, the Cerritos footballers could not be held for a defeat in their Homecoming game Saturday night as the Falcons emerged for a high-spirited 28-19 triumph in front of an energetic crowd of 7,500.

Cerritos, now posting a 3-1 South Coast Conference mark, improved to 4-2-1 overall as they dropped the Hornets to 2-2 in the SCC and 3-4 overall.

This Saturday the Birds will face off against Pasadena in Falcon Stadium at 7:30 in an important conference clash.

Both clubs are currently tied for second place behind front runner Golden West (4-0).

Cerritos, who moved into the top twenty in the state after their come-from-behind win at Long Beach a week back, will travel to Golden West (ranked number four in the state before their 37-21 victory over Mt. SAC last Saturday), after their battle with the Lancers.

28 STRAIGHT

After building up a 13-0 second quarter advantage, Fullerton saw the lead crumble, witnessing the Falcon scoring attack put 28 unanswered points on the board.

With 1:50 left in the first half, Cerritos took over at their own 20 and drove down the field for the score, courtesy of a two-yard sweep from running back Andre Wooten, which tied the ball game at 13 apiece.

Twenty-seven seconds remained when Todd Waymier's conversion kick gave his team the lead for good.

91-YARDER

For Cerritos, the fireworks didn't stop at halftime.

With the ball at their own six-yard line, the Falcons recorded a historical drive.

After last week's hero, Dan Briones, rushed for a three-yard pickup, Wooten exploded for a 91-yard touchdown, breaking the school record set by Steve Mitchell against Fullerton in 1983.

Wooten completed the evening with 184 yards on 21 carries and three touchdowns.

This was all accomplished for the running back while nursing an injured ankle and sore back.

Last week Wooten was really hurting, as his statistics illustrated: a mere five yards on nine carries.

With the Wooten incredible run and Waymier's extra point (he went 4-4 in the game), Cerritos was on top, 21-13, with 11:57 to go in the third.

WOOTEN AGAIN...

As if he needed to look any more impressive, Andre Wooten picked up his fourth touchdown of the contest, this time passing.

On the halfback option, Wooten connected with wide receiver Anthony Williams for a 39-yard fling. Waymier added the boot point and the Falcons were sitting on top of a 28-13 lead with 10:26 left in the game.

The Falcon defense allowed only their second touchdown of the season in fourth quarter play when Fullerton quarterback Richard Williams found teammate Jason Williams for a 40-yard scoring pass.

An attempted pass conversion was missed as Cerritos maintained a 28-19.

The defense also maintained the SCC's number one ranked rusher going into the game.

Fullerton's Andrew Greer, who was averaging 105.5 yards a game before he met the Falcon D, was held to 77 yards on 13 carries.

FIRST QUARTER BLUES

Despite an opening kickoff return of 52 yards by Rodney Bowman to the Hornet 36-yard line, the Falcons, who have only managed 14 points all season long in first quarter action, were shut down once again as Fullerton took a 7-0 lead.

After Fullerton built up a 13-0 lead with an early second period score, Falcon quarterback Stuart Betty replaced Don Sabella to get the Birds going.

And going he got them.

On his first play in the contest, Betty struck Andre Guidry for 17 yards. Later in the series, the Falcon snap-taker found the coach's son, Frank Mazzotta Jr., for an 18-yard pick-up, placing the ball on the Fullerton 14.

For the game, Betty completed seven of 13 passes for 88 yards. Sabella connected on only three of his nine throws for 21 yards.

After the Betty to Mazzotta connection, which had two more together for another 26 yards, Wooten scored his first TD of the night, cutting up the middle for the 14 yards.

From that point on, Cerritos was on their way to the Homecoming win.

X-Country heads for SCC finals

The women's cross country team took a fourth place tie with Fullerton in the South Coast Conference Finals hosted by Golden West Friday. The ladies competed against seven other teams in the conference.

Lea MacFarlane was the first Falcon over the line with a time of 18:12. She placed seventh overall.

Finishing second was Ana Covarrubias with a time of 18:58, placing 14th overall.

With a time of 19:28, Esther Cuellar finished third for Cerritos and 18th overall.

Laura Vazquez was the fourth Falcon finisher with a time of 20:06, placing 28th overall.

Kim Lynk placed third for the Lady Birds, placing 29th overall with a time of 20:15.

The men's cross country team had a Halloween trick last Friday when they competed against seven other teams in the South Coast Conference finals and finished sixth.

Aurelio Trujillo was the first Falcon across the line, finishing seventh overall with a time of 19:51. Trujillo has consistently finished first for the Cerritos team.

Second over the line and 24th overall was Mike Valdez with a time of 20:47.

Scott Gray finished third in the meet, 28th overall, with a time of 20:58.

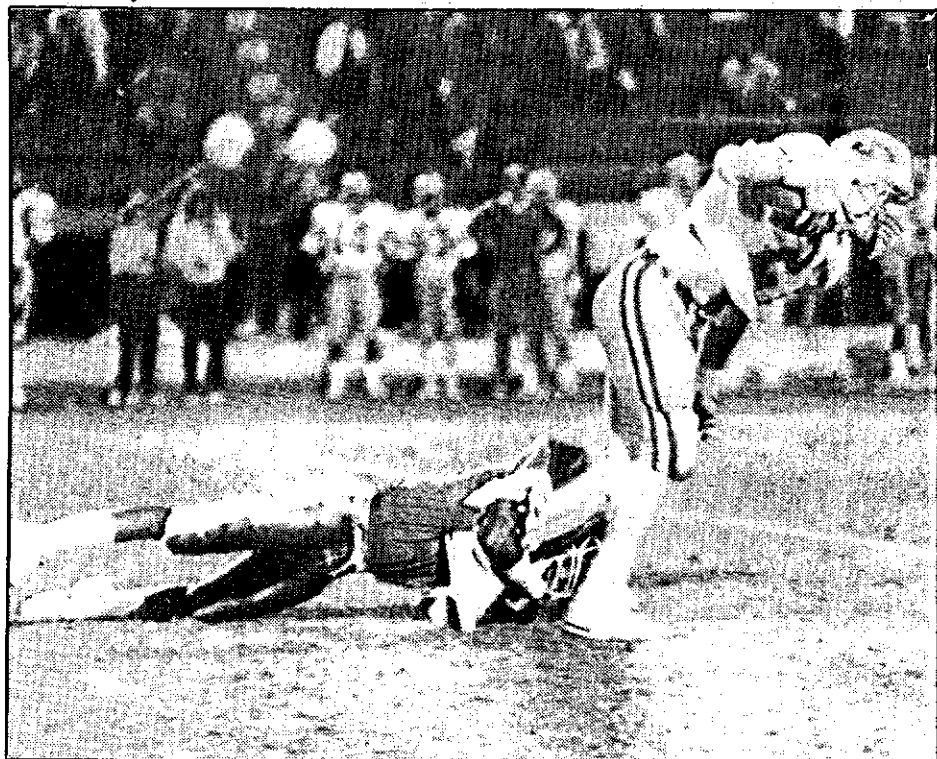

Fourth for the Falcons and 36th overall was Jose Bibian with a time of 21:33.

Mario Zamarripa, in the last race of his Cerritos career, came in 37th overall, fifth for the Falcons, with a time of 21:34.

BIG 'D' — Falcon defender trips up Hornet ball carrier.

Wooten breaks record; runs 91 yards for TD

By JOHN WELSH
TM Sports Editor

Andre Wooten was labeled a "one man gang" after he led the Falcon football team to a 28-19 victory over Fullerton Saturday night.

The Falcon running back racked up 184 yards on 21 carries, scored three touchdowns on the ground, and even passed for one.

Highlighting his game was a record-breaking 91-yard touchdown score.

Wooten broke the school record for longest run set by Steve Mitchell set back in 1983 against Fullerton.

A week back, Wooten was playing with pain as his numbers indicated; a five yard game total on nine carries.

"I was still a little sore," he said in his game with the Hornets. "But I would be okay after I stretched out."

The play, according to Wooten, was a 34 slant.

"My coach (Mike Merkle, offensive line) told me 'Keep going through the pocket, and before long you'll break it,'" Wooten said.

"I cut back across," he recalled, "then there was just daylight."

A grad from Cerritos High, and a CIF Player of the Year, Wooten recalls having another such long run.

However, as he was running down the field, he was caught from behind by the opponent's defenders.

"I was determined to make it this time," said Wooten.

With his 658 total Wooten is currently ranked 10th on Cerritos' single season rushing list.

He needs only to average 114 yards in the Falcon's last three games to be only the third player in the school's history to break the 1000 yard mark.

Wooten is only 385 yards off from the record set in one season by Ray Aderman back in 1957. Aderman chalked up 1,043 yards that first season for Cerritos College football.

FALCON CLIPBOARD

The Falcons' 28-19 victory over Fullerton Saturday dropped the Hornets' record down to 2-2 in the South Coast Conference.

Up until this defeat, Fullerton had not lost more than one game in conference action since 1979 when they went 4-2.

Fullerton accumulated an incredible 34 win, five loss, one tie SCC record throughout seasons 1980-1985.

The Birds have accounted for the last two out of three Hornet conference losses.

Falcon spikers still in second; face El Camino Friday night

The Cerritos College women's volleyball team remained in a second-place tie with three other squads after splitting a pair of matches last week.

The Falcons dropped a 10-15, 11-15, 12-15 decision Wednesday at Fullerton but rebounded to sweep Pasadena Friday 15-7, 15-8 and 15-10.

Fullerton, Pasadena, Golden West and Cerritos are all 4-3 in the SCC. The conference's second place team will receive a berth in the regional playoffs.

The Falcons are on the road for both matches this week. They travel to Mt SAC Wednesday and El Camino Friday. Both contests begin at 7 p.m.

"We played a very strong match in all areas," said Cerritos Coach Jeannine Prindle about the Pasadena victory. "Our offense was very effective."

Prindle was especially pleased with the play of Carla Bass, who had 13 kills, and Heidi Angevine, who had 10. The front line spiking was set up by Rocky Norcia and Mickey Nomura.

Christine Duffy had a strong match serving with eight aces. The defense was paced by Bonnie Knox and Karen Sutherland. Knox had seven stuffs, while Sutherland had five. Reyna Gutierrez, according to Prindle, was also effective as the setter.

Water polo loses to Mt. SAC finish up season on Friday

By CARMEN PEDRAZA
Staff Writer

Contrary to Falcon poloist expectations, the team fell short in a 9-8 decision to Mt. SAC.

The loss places the birds at 7-5 in conference and 9-8 overall.

The Falcons hosted Chaffey yesterday. Scores not available at press time.

Cerritos will finish the season on Friday as they travel to Rio Hondo.

In the loss to Mt. SAC, Cerritos held a 3-2 lead thanks to two goals by Al Reyes and one by Carlos DeSilva.

Despite all efforts, the Mounties outscored Cerritos 4-1 in the second period to take a 6-4 lead into the third period.

Scoring the only Falcon goal in the second period was Shawn Ramirez.

The Birds saw Mt. SAC score two more goals before the Falcons' Bruce English put the ball in the net, raising the score 8-5.

Although Cerritos generated offense in the fourth it wasn't enough to stop the Mounties.

With three minutes and two seconds remaining, team captain Dave Carpenter closed the gap 9-7 with a goal.

DeSilva was able to score one more goal in the last five seconds, but by then it was too late.

DeSilva continues to lead the Falcons with 48 goals closely followed by English with 47.

Next closest are Ramos with 24 and Carpenter with 17.

Hard core football fan suffers know-nothing neighbor at game

Homecoming was an experience! It really brought out a lot of first-time rooters, cheering for the Falcons to win.

It also brought out the uninformed spectator.

You know the ones, the grandmother of the Homecoming queen candidate and cousin Harry, the quarterback's namesake from back home.

Getting to the game early is a ritual. We always plan to arrive in time to "set up shop," so to speak.

First the blanket so no one infringes on "our territory" and then the thermos of hot coffee and, last but not least, the old binoculars to catch the action.

The first hint of what was to come happened as we sat down.

I heard this "voice of experience" say they're warming up on the field, we're just in time, and the reply to this statement coming from a little voice; "Oh, me too. I'm putting on my jacket to warm up too!"

No, no, no — I'm not ready to sit in front of a play-by-play announcer again.

I'm sure you know the type. It's usually some big galoot with a monstrous voice telling his (or her) uninformed partner everything that's going on right in front of their eyes, and more often than not calls the wrong penalty or procedure anyway.

Hooray! A T.D. for our side. Guess what our friend said then? "Is it over now?" I

Home opener for wrestlers tonight

By KEVIN LINDSEY
TM Staff Writer

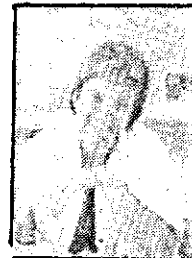

The Cerritos grapplers were pinned to a seventh-place finish in last weekend's Cypress tournament.

Three starters stayed at home with injuries, but will be back this Wednesday when the grapplers take on SBUC in their home opener at Cerritos at 7:30 p.m.

Cerritos' ranking in the tourney was some improvement over last Wednesday, Oct. 29, when the Falcon wrestlers were crushed 39-6 by Palomar. This loss drops them to 0-2 in South Coast Conference play.

The players picked up their performance from Palomar when they made a show of power at Cypress. Levi Chin took second place in the 137 weight class, while Nick Skourtas took third place in the heavy-weight class.

The only bright spots of the loss at Palomar were Dan Freund and John Schneider. Freund beat the fifth-rated opponent 9-4 in the 129 weight class. Schneider also beat the fifth-rated player in his 180 weight class.

Don't they know anything?

couldn't believe it. I swear it's true, on the referee's rule book.

How can anybody not know that there are six full quarters in a football game?

When the cheerleaders started yelling "offense, offense," our articulate neighbor said (so help me) "yes, I do believe with all that running around they could be a little offensive." Do you believe it?

Me neither.

The game was a thriller though, and I really got caught up in it until a darling little blue eyed blonde of about 4 years decided she was the newest Kamakaze pilot of record.

Paper planes were dive bombing and landed with a direct hit. Right in the middle of my coffee they landed, every darn time. The Red Sox needed her pitching ability. They would have won in four straight.

To make matters worse, blondie's grandfather is my Business teacher and I couldn't say a word.

Homecoming was fun as always, even if we were surrounded by newcomers.

I was a newcomer myself once and couldn't tell a holding penalty from an off-sides.

Now I belong to that elite group of people: the football fan. I'm ready for anything, anything.

Especially more exciting victories for the home team like Saturday night's.

What was the final score again?

I can't remember. Oh well.

I think we won by something like two grandslams or so.

Does that mean game, set, match?

Food Services students rise and shine to create day's culinary offerings

BAKING BOUT — Gino Hawks and Greg Jellum, right, ready bake goodies.

By KENNY O'LEARY
TM Staff Writer

The day starts early for the Food Services students at Cerritos College.

At 7 a.m. you'll find Rudy Rozier and George Martinez baking an assortment of fresh muffins and cookies for sale in the cafeteria.

Bonnie Chounramany and Cindy Hageman have started on the doughnuts that will be sold in the Coffee Shop.

Linda Whittemore and Cecilia Edwards are beginning the preparation of the lunch menu.

The students in the Chef's Training and Professional Baking classes prepare it all — from soup to doughnuts.

While some students concentrate on one part of the program, others, like Greg Jellum, complete both the chef's and baker's training.

When they leave Cerritos, they're ready to work in restaurants, bakeries, hotels, or businesses of their own.

Under the instruction of Rozier and Chefs Ellis Robinson and Earl Douglas, students acquire all the essentials for running a productive and profitable business.

In addition to the kitchen duties, the students learn the fundamentals of ordering supplies and equipment and dealing with other merchants.

Health and sanitation classes are also a part of the food service package.

When the Cafeteria doors open at 11 a.m., the day is nowhere near over for the students.

Their morning has been spent slicing and dicing and baking everything to perfection. The afternoon will be spent in class learning the business end of the profession.

As part of the class assignment, the students must create their own recipes.

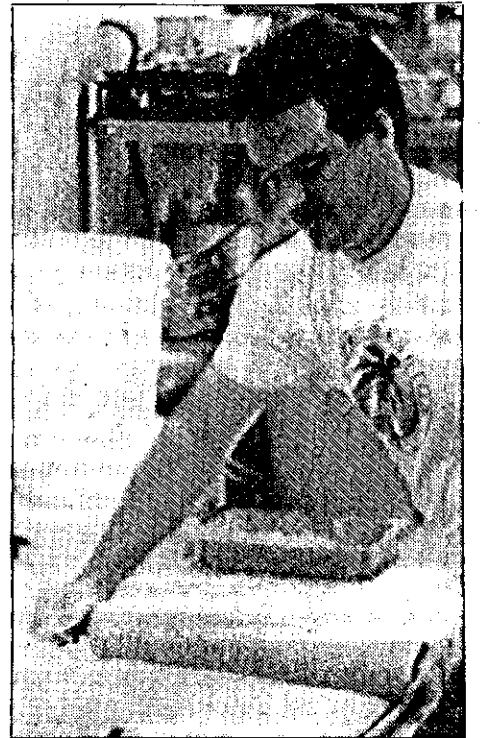

Wayne Bozarth, a first semester student, came up with a cookie creation he calls "Marble Marvel."

In addition to the food served in the Cafeteria, the students provide all the fresh rolls and desserts for the Coffee Shop. Inn Hent makes the ham and cheese croissants recently added to the Coffee Shop menu.

Another first semester student, Wendy Williams, prepares the submarine sandwiches.

Whether it's Eric Plant's barbecue sauce or Maureen Flan's latest cookie creation, the wide range of tempting foods served up by the Food Services students is on a par with some of the better restaurants in the area.

Try it — you'll like it.
