history of student government at Cerritos is on the Student Senate agenda today.

The unprecedented hearing was held last week, putting other pressing Senate business on hold, a procedure specified in the ASCC Constitution.

Pending business included bills for immediate confirmation of a vice-presidential appointee and a controversial reform of the awards committee authored by Senators Ed McGinn and Sherry Senf.

The impeachment hearing was called for by Senators Kimberly Chiasson and The first impeachment vote in the McGinn who accused fellow Senator Richard De Laby of conflict of interest.

Gomez, Kafel only slate; confirmation needed by voters

Voters at the three major campus polling places for today and tomorrow's presidential election won't have a tough time deciding

Jesus Gomez and Kelly Kafel make up the sole slate, vying for ASCC President and Vice-President, respectively.

Polls are located near the Elbow Room across from the Social Sciences Building, south of Falcon Way at the east entrance of the Health Sciences Building, and in front of the coffee shop.

Booth times are 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. for both days of voting for the student body's two top posts.

To be officially elected, Gomez and Kafel need 50 percent of the ballots cast plus one vote, according to Associate Dean of Student Activities Phil Houseman.

Despite the only ticket running, Gomez said he remains wary in light of a possible write-in opponent.

"I see the write-in as a viable candidate,

Gomez said, "We haven't won yet." "In a way, we're expecting a write-in,"

Gomez, 20, listed his major goals as president will be to encourage night students ± involvement in student activities, make regular day students at-large more active, and to shore up support for a student body

Houseman said with only one declared a candidacy, there is likely to be a loss of 🗲 enthusiasm and excitement.

"However, the (ASCC Supreme) Court is going about the election with the same enthusiasm and procedures as in any semester," said Houseman.

This week, be aware of being a card-carrying donor

A gift of life.

Johnny's death was unfortunate. He was young, healthy, active and had a long prosperous life ahead of him.

He's gone now, but he lives on in spirit.

You see, Johnny was like one of the many people in America who carry an Organ Donor Card.

Because of his foresight others have

His big heartedness could help someone with an ailing heart. In fact, your heart, kidneys, corneas, pancreas, liver, skin, tendons, and more could go to someone that is in dire need. This week is National Donor Awareness Week and a drive is on to show people the importance of a final gift that they or their relatives may make.

The most common organ transplant is that of the kidney.

A quasi-existance on a dialysis machine can be averted or ended by the transplant of a kidney.

Donated skin grafts can assist in the healing of, and in some instances, save the life of a burn victim.

Unfortunately the supply cannot keep up with the demand. As few as four severe burn victims could deplete the entire Southern California tissue bank in Torrance. There are thousand of dialysis patients on the kidney transplant list. Part of the problem is caused by an attitude that states that you cannot have an afterlife unless your body is buried intact. Some relatives of potential donors cannot allow it because they cannot accept the death of a loyed one.

The fact is that even if you carry a donor card relatives must give permission before the harvest of greatly needed, still living organs can take place.

It is critical that in addition to carrying an Organ Donor Card you make it clear to your relatives that in the case of accidental death you wish to donate your organs. The continued advance of medicine has made the life expentancy of transplanted organs greatly increase. Transplant patients, that received a kidney in the mid sixties, are still living a mostly normal life. That is not to say that transplants do not have their side effects, brought on by powerful anti-rejection drugs, but the alternative of death or a minimal existance as a dialysis patient is not nearly so viable. So please take the time to fill out a dopor card and talk to your loved ones about the possibility of organ donation.

After all the greatest gift is a gift of life.

Administrative realignments approved Tredway, Epple clash on procedure; 3 posts to go

By RICH DE LABY TM Associate Editor

A heated exchange between two lawyers on the Board of Trustees held up approval of one major appointment on the new administrative realignment plan, the rest of which were approved by the Trustees.

The Board refused to confirm the portion of Vice-President of Instruction George Melican's hotly contested realignment program that called for the promotion of Dr. Jan Dennis-Rounds from a classified position to an administrative post.

The realignment is a reorganization of several administrative and classified positions that includes the abolishment of some and creating of several new titles.

Also held off were the positions of Dean of Business and Industry and Dean of Institutional advancement, which are still under consideration by the President's

Dr. Dennis-Rounds currently holds the classified position of Director of Institutional Research/ Development, but would have moved into the administrative position, of Administrative Dean of Educational Support Services had the measure been passed by the board.

A seven-day promotional in-house screening is set to determine who will be given the newly formed title.

Procedural bickering at last Tuesday's meeting reminded one of arguments that have become commonplace in Student Government on the Cerritos Campus.

The move of promotion drew complaints in that it goes against the board policy of Trustees Bob Epple, who is currently running against Wayne Grisham for Assemblyman in the 63rd district, and Harold Tredway filled the room with tension as they argued the question along with a procedural issue.

"It is a slap in the face to those who have been doing the job all along without the title to offer it to others," stated Tredway.

"I can't see justifying moving to an administrative position without screening," stated Epple. "If the best person for the job is truly who they (the administration) say, then that the person will rise to the top.

Tredway moved on by motioning to vote on all the realignment issues (nine in all).

Epple answered sharply by making an additional motion to split the issues, thus voting on each of the nine independent of one

Tredway objected angrily, stating, There is no evidence that shows this move (to split the issue) is proper."

Board Vice-President Mark Durrant helped relieve some of the tension as he stated sarcastically, "The only two lawyers on the board and you can't decide on a procedural matter." A ten minute recess was eventually called so a book on Robert's Rules of Order could be obtained to back up Epple's

The isues were then split and the Support Services post was set for screening.

Of the issues approved by the Board, the assigning of three assistant deans to the newly appointed Dean of Extended Day/ Weekend College, Keith Adams, was the most outstanding change.

The move was considered necessary to keep up with the growing number of parttime students.

Other confirmations include the Director of Library, to be established through a screening process, and the addition of the vocational division to the responsibilities of the Dean of Academic Affairs, Dr. Adolph Johnson.

EDITOR'S NOTE - These editorials are opinions of Editorial Board members on the unprecedented Student Senate impeachment which has created a furor....

AND WHAT IS AN 'IMPEACHABLE' ACT?

Senators Ed McGinn, Kim Chiasson, Sherry Senf, Jerome Andrews and company have sharpened their skates for one last round on Senatorial

Will there actually be a vote today?

The impeachment hearing they aggressively pushed to oust Senator Richard De Laby, a journalism student formerly covering Student Senate, has been viewed by some as an impulsive attempt at retaliation toward the press.

Charges of conflict of interest are thin, to say the least. Hair-splitting seems to be a preoccupation with some senators.

Charges of lying by De Laby about no longer covering "Student Government" are unfounded.

He does not, however, cover "Student Senate," as he was accused of after writing a story about some Cabinet resignations.

That's what prompted Chiasson and McGinn, the Senate's two most vocal members, to instigate

To quote Senator Andrews at last weeks hearing, "It is not for you (De Laby) to decide whether it was a conflict of interest. It is for us (the Senate) to decide whether we feel it is a conflict of interest."

It's time to wake up and realize that Student government is part of college academia. When academic freedom is infringed upon by a governing body, it is time to seriously question somebody's motives.

This whole impeachment trial sits on very thin

And those who will vote today should take note that the waters of academic freedom run very deep on college campuses.

OTES OF COOLER HEADS

"He that is without sin among you, let him cast the first stone."

New testament: John, 8:7

It took a very wise man to say that.

Wisdom has been conspicuously missing in the ASCC Senatorial chamber as of late. Richard De Laby has been accused of conduct unbecoming a senator.

At the next ASCC Senate meeting a vote will be taken to decide whether or not he will be impeached.

It seems that he, a member of the Talon Marks staff, had the audacity to write an article about the

The issue that seems to have risen to the surface in the recent Senate's muddled doings is that of flict of interest. How may the student be better served?

Is it a crime for a senator to report news? Are there some clandestine secrets that the senate is privy to, but that the students may not know?

Is it wrong for a well informed student of government, who happens also to be a Senator, to write about the subject that he knows best?

How may the public interest be better served? Would a student athlete be lambasted because he tried to further the benefits of athletics in the

Is it possible that a speech team member be impeached because he voted to carry a budget that included forensics?

No, they are watching out for the interests of all the students.

So was Senator De Laby.

The separation of the press and government has long been an issue.

With prior restraint nagging at the heels of free press, it is a wonder that some communist-like system of state run news has not been instituted.

Patriot Thomas Jefferson said, "When the press is free and every man able to read, all is safe.'

As the charge is ludicrous and is probably based on somewhat less than clear thinking, there should be no doubt that the Senate will come to its collective senses and vote against impeachment. Let us allow the impeachment proceedings to die still-born. The power players, who know that there is not enough time in the semester to carry out a trial, have had their day, at the expense of Senator De Laby, and the entire student body.

It is time to let cooler Senatorial heads prevail.

NEXT TIME, CHECK WITH ADVISOR first

Is our ASCC Senate living up to its name? A Senate is an assembly or council having the "highest deliberative functions." . sugmes 200 Policies made and actions taken therein should, therefore, be enacted with wisdom and expediency.

That would seem to leave the recent actions of our Student Senate in a questionable light.

Can certain persons be thought of as wise when they call for the impeachment of the ASCC President because he hesitated to send an appointed Vice President before these same certain lions who would "grill" him to taste?

Could it be considered expedient to tie up normal

Senate business with impeachment hearings, and the like, over allegations that a newly approved senator lied?

They cannot be proved and are, therefore, slanderous.

Isn't it an ignorant waste of time, effort, and money to argue a matter that cannot be resolved before the end of the semester allowing for due process of laws governing such cases?

Do we want Student Senators who show up for an impeachment hearing unaware of what has brought the proceedings about, and requiring on-the-spot enlightenment?

It is obvious, by its name, that the Student Senate is a place for its Senators to learn. No one can argue that point.

You be the judge.

And the option of impeachment is a viable, valid action in context. . magent att

That is what the Senate advisor is for... 2 To advise young and excitable Senators of the implications and consequences of such undertakings. Perhaps if such wisdom had been sought and heeded, our Senate would now be conducting expedient business. Hopefully, the lessons they are learning at student body expense will not be soon forgotten. Is our ASCC Senate living up to its name?

THIS IS NOT THE TIME NOR COURSE

As a training ground for would-be politicians, student government seems to fulfill its obligations.

Practical lessons are taking place in election procedures, rules of order and even impeachment

Although not to be taken lightly, impeachment, simply stated, is an accusation of misconduct.

To a few of our ASCC Senators, writing an informational account of executive cabinet proceedings for Talon Marks by a fellow Senator is considered misconduct and a conflict of interest.

appears to be a hasty - if not a misinformed-

For the Senators questioning the conflict of interest - there is no other formal way to get

But when the call for the hearing was initiated, there was only five weeks left in the semester.

Impeachment proceedings take precedence over all other Senate business and requires a minimum of two Senate meetings to complete.

Several important issues had to be postponed, including a bill to reform the awards committee and the appointment of a new vice-president.

In light of these few facts, impeachment may not have been the wisest course of action.

College provides a relatively safe environment in which to learn form mistakes, and hopefully our Senators have.

Of course, hindsight is generally 20/20.

WHAT MOTIVES LURK IN THE POLITICKING?

The recent move to impeach Senator Richard De Laby presents some intriguing questions that merit our attention.

Admittedly, having a member of government on the Editorial Board of Talon Marks makes for some discomfort. Asking an editor for quotes to complete the critical story you have just done on his role as a Senator can cause tension around the office.

The bigger problem here is one which the reader owns: How can our readers be sure that their newspaper is giving the straight story on Student government when politicians are also editors?

And can we expect a vocation as critical of others as journalism, to be forgiven for even the appearance of impropriety?

Although these are pressing questions, they bear no weight in the impeachment proceedings; Senator De Laby is being charged with lying.

He is being impeached by his peers for allegedly telling fellow politicos that he would not write any stories about Student Government, and then writing one.

If the voters were to impeach every politician who lied to them, we would have nobody left to run the ship.

What is really griping the members of our Senate who seek De Laby's political demise? The dictionary gives two definitions of impeachment; 1. To charge with malfeasance in office before a proper tribunal. 2. To challenge or discredit; attack; degrade.

As former Party Whip Ed McGinn held not only that office, but also served as Talon Marks Editorial Editor last semester, (and wrote political commentary all the while) it would seem that these actions do not constitute malfeasance.

Is the Senate attempting to discredit and degrade De Laby, and if so, why?

Does the ever-present press cause our politicos concern over possible bad press coverage?

Why are some elected officials so quick to ignore the will of the voters, and seek to unseat one of their peers?

Both the ASCC Government and the Talon Marks are in a peculiar situation with regards to the De Laby case, but those most affected are the students of Cerritos College.

Both the ASCC Government and the Talon Marks richly deserve to hear from you on this matter.

ASCC presidental election today needs your mark of support

The world needs new leaders who care, Young people incapable of rethinking old issues need not apply. Just vote:

After all, old problems have a consistent nature. They defy any presumption that current efforts to resolve lingering problems are adequate.

Ignoring global issues simply permits them to continue.

The Iranian crossfire, hijackings and ruthless killings in Kuwait, brutal slayings in Northern Ireland, or the escalating death toll of Palestinians by Israeli troops and civilians packs very little impact to the passive couch potatoe.

On the home front, executive and military advisors appear to act on their own initiative, without public or congressional consent. The widespread affect of such executive misdoings is evident in the gang leaders who encourage increased violence and killing sprees in Los Angeles.

Drug lords get richer and more powerful at the cost of lives and at the expense of the government. All these signal a need for greater public concern.

It is the responsibility of those with the benefits of higher learning to pursue a better understanding of such world trends.

As ones who can see a future of even more bloodshed in these ongoing conflicts, shouldn't we ask some straight questions?

Questions such as: Why are these situations allowed to continue? What can be done by elected officials to prevent future suffering in the world?

No student is a perfect scholar of world events.

Yet, for college students and citizens, a reservoir of information is available from radio, television sion, newspapers, magazines, movies, novels, and myriad mass media.

These resources can be easily tapped to fit any schedule. Of course, we choose what we want to learn, and what we wish to ignore.

Tragically, the current trend in our young student culture seems to be apathetic or "cool" unaffected and lazily unconcerned about problems at large.

This type of self-serving mentality it reflected in government results in self defeat. Witness Mr. Noriega in his own brand of Panamainan politics.

Such instances are even common on the Cerritos campus.

A few self-serving ASCC Senators have defeated their own purpose by being so obviously self-concerned that the Senate would not go along with their proposals.

It is also reflected by the public's unwillingness to get involved.

Senators are elected with as few as 40 votes and only 1,000 out of an eligible 15,000 vote in the ASCC Presidential election.

We (society) need new leaders on all levels, but unless there is a change in the apathetic trend, things will only get worse.
