CONTROVERSIAL ETHNIC AREA ISSUE LOSES STEAM

Four Trustee seats, seven district zones on ballot

By MARK HEUSTIS
Editor in Chief

The creation of seven ethnically derived Trustee areas, as well as the election of three four-year and a single two-year term on the Board will appear on the ballot of the Nov. 7 consolidated elections. Incumbents Board President Mark Durant, and members Ada Steenhoek and appointee Joseph Stits will vie for the three four-year terms.

Appointed incumbent John Moore will seek a seat for an unexpired term, ending November 1992.

The current Board sent the trustee area district proposal to the County Committee on School District organization last February for approval and placement on the November ballot.

The proposal, designated Proposition B on the ballot, was prepared by the Southern California Association of Government, and is based on ethnic equality within the seven districts.

Each district would be represented by one Board member, who would be elected by only those residing within that area.

Other candidates seeking election to the Board's four-year seats are teachers John Paul Drayer and Virginia Epple Lane, inventor William F. Mohler, community organization administrator Rick D. Sanchez, and Richard John Vandenburg Jr., executive director of Los Angeles City College.

The ethnically derived district plan was chosen over others based on city boundaries, school district area and a composite proposal.

Vying with Moore for the two-year seat is engineer/teacher Ralph Kephart.

Should Proposition B pass, it would not affect the terms of current Board members, but would be used in future elections to fill the positions.

Lady spikers ranked No. 1 in state with 10-0 overall season mark

The Cerritos College women's volleyball team is the number one ranked team in the state.

Last Friday, the spikers proved they deserved that ranking by knocking off East Los Angeles College 15-2, 15-3, 15-11, bringing their over record to 6-0 in conference and 10-0 over all.

Yesterday the Falcons played Long Beach City, with results not available at press time.

Conference foe El Camino is Cerritos' next victim, as the Falcons hope to preserve the precious ranking.

Cerritos has never had a number one ranked volleyball team in their history until now.

"Being ranked #1 is very nice. But what we need to do now, is to go out and continue to play consistently throughout the rest of the season," said Co-Coach Jeanine Prindle

Leading the way for the Falcons against ELAC was Melissa Lynch who had seven kills, along with Teresa Velazquez, Rayna Vanderlip, Diane Dang, who each had six kills.

Jennifer Kretschmar, Tammi Johnson and Susan Lane also had a hand in the victory with four kills.

Lane, had an outstanding week, recording eight kills, three aces, and a 40% hitting average.

Gobec stresses officer training; urges use of red phones for help

By LISA PUCH
TM News Editor

The recent gun issue — and the student survey of whether campus police should be armed — has raised concern not only among faculty, board members, staff, and students but also within the campus police itself, according to Chief Mike Gobec.

Gobec said he wants people to be aware that the campus police are just that—Police.

He said he feels that some people assume that campus police have a "lack of training and supervision." But that's just the opposite, he says.

The Peace Officers Standard In Training for the State of California holds evaluations for the Campus Police each year. This helps them monitor and update their training.

This year's evaluation was conducted two weeks ago and the campus police came out with flying colors.

Gobec feels strongly about the results achieved from this program. He's had two officers enroll and graduate, one student about to enter, and another student, Richard Bukowiecki, scheduled to graduate from the program Nov. 17, and will start working at Cerritos College.

Gobec also stresses the importance of people using the escort system provided by the Campus Police. He encourages students to use the red phones located in every building on campus. He stressed these phones should be used not only for an emergency, but also for escort service as well.

Many night students have to walk to their cars alone after late night classes. For their protection and safety this system was devised, Gobec said.

If there is an emergency or an escort is desired, all a student has to do is pick up any red emergency phone.

There's no need to dial because by picking up the receiver it automatically rings in the Campus Police office.

These phones are accessible 24 hours day seven days a week, and the service is provided to or from class.

outstanding in leadership will receive a Silver Falcon.

Gold Falcons will be issued to full time students who excel in leadership and personal integrity.

Inter-Club Council (ICC) awards will also be issued.

College Holidays set

The college will be closed Friday, Nov. 10, for Veteran's Day.

Thanksgiving is set for Nov. 23-24.

No Talon Marks will be published the week of Nov. 20. The last edition will be Dec. 7.

EDITORIAL

Trustee area Prop
confuses question

Ethnic equality is a hot issue in the Nov. 7 consolidated elections.

Should Proposition B pass, the Cerritos Community College district will be divided into seven areas with approximately equal population and ethnic diversity. One representative from each area would be elected by the voters from that area.

The system sounds simple, but is it really?

The terms of Board members would not be affected until the next general election. This is one point in contention.

Since the Trustees do not live one-to-a-district, it is possible the next election will be devoid of incumbents.

Should this happen, the continuity necessary for an effective Board would be endangered.

Board members' terms do not expire simultaneously, so who is to say which district would first fall under the proposed change?

What will happen if a district fails to field a candidate? Will two or more areas be incorporated?

Since the breakdown is based on the most recent census will the 1990 census require a realignment of the proposed Trustee areas?

These questions, which are of real importance to the voter, have not been answered.

The main source of information for the average voter, the sample ballot, does not address these issues. An argument against Proposition B, submitted by former Trustee Dale Hardeman, attacks it on the basis that it will "eventually pit all the ethnic groups against each other."

This very emotional appeal fails to acknowledge the fact that the district boundaries were drawn to create racial equity within each district.

It would not set up separate areas, with each inhabited by a single racial group.

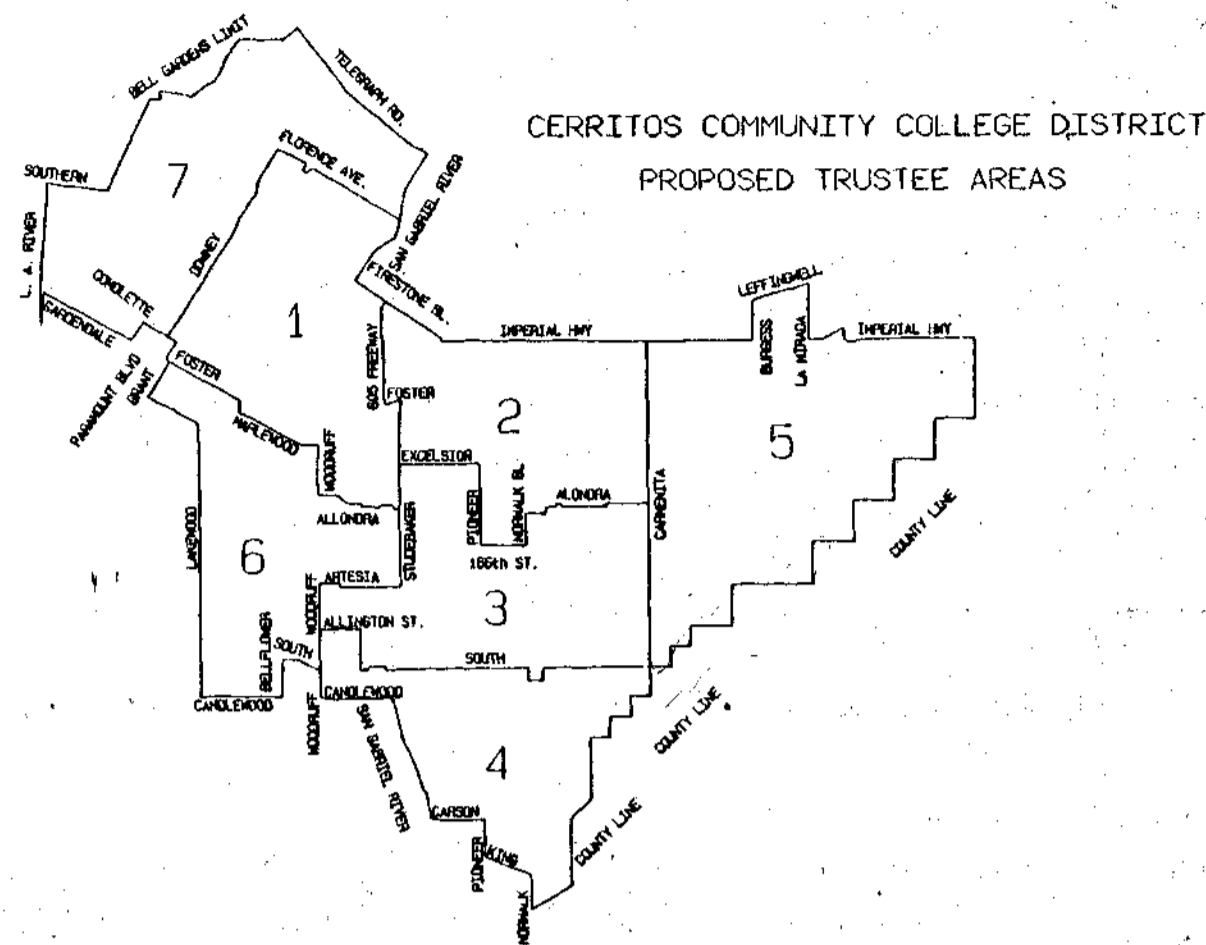

The ratio of ethnicity within each area would remain approximately the same as that of the single at-large college district, which is currently being used.

The proposition is not flawed by its lack of equal racial representation, but by the lack of details regarding its implementation.

No case for the issue was included on the sample ballot. Even the people who raised a ruckus to get it on have apparently backed off.

Where are instigators Art Perez and Kathleen Navejas today?

It is up to the voter to decide whether the proposition's effectiveness will be crippled by this lack, and vote accordingly.

Transferring students need

Rolling Stones wow crowd after 8-year hiatus; prove Rock 'n Roll is here to stay

By JUSTIN VELEZ
TM Features Editor

Way back in '69, The Rolling Stones were number one on the charts with their song "Honky Tonk Woman."

Now in '89, they are leaving the charts "shattered" with their number one album "Steel Wheels." Much of the current album's success can be attributed to their long awaited and overdue North America sell-out tour.

Some say the reason they haven't toured since 1981 is because of the strained relationship between Mick Jagger and guitarist Keith Richards.

Something must have changed though, since they were at the L.A. Coliseum Oct. 18-22 with local bad boys "Guns n' Roses" and the up-and-coming "Living Colour."

Not much can be said about Living Colour since their one hour set could only claim two semi-hits; the hard rockin' "Cult of Personality" and the danceable "Glamorboy."

They were entertaining enough but soon forgotten in the wake of the heavy hitters.

Guns n' Roses, who are no strangers to controversy, didn't fail to live up to their reputation. On the first night, singer Axl Rose shocked the music world with a declaration that "This will be my last gig with Guns n' Roses" due to drug problems within the band.

The long-haired, leather-clad singer seemed to be having some problems of his own that night, such as actually falling off of the stage in front of 80,000 fans.

Fortunately for Guns n' Roses fans, he apologized the following night to the audience and band members for his rash words and made assurances that the band would remain intact.

As for the music, they had no problems at all. The set came through powerfully with their aggressive razor-edge style. To this, the crowd responded with thunderous applause.

They let flow powerful energy with songs like "Welcome to the Jungle" and yet had the ability to make the transition to slower, prettier ballads such as "Patience," "Sweet Child O' Mine," and their version of Bob Dylan's "Knocking on Heaven's Door."

The black maned guitar player, Slash (yes, that's his name) let loose with a grinding, gritty guitar solo during "Rocket Queen" and played with a ferocity rarely found in music today.

Although not as established as the Rolling Stones, they have achieved quite a following of very loyal fans and are one of the few opening bands that are good enough to stand on their own.

It's too bad that they're not part of the regular tour and are only playing at L.A. Coliseum.

Then Mick and gang rolled on stage.

Fittingly enough, they led off with the smash hit "Start Me Up" and were greeted with waves of applause by adoring fans.

They proceeded to play songs from just about every phase of their career from "Ruby Tuesday" to tunes from their latest album, such as "Sad, Sad, Sad."

The crowd, if not as juiced up as for Guns n' Roses, was certainly into the classic songs such as "Satisfaction", "Sympathy for the Devil", and "Jumping Jack Flash."

Eric Clapton even made an appearance for the Thursday show. That's when it really got going, and at one point you could actually hear a majority of people singing along boldly as if they had written the songs themselves.

The huge stage was unbeatable, consisting of steam pipes, nets, catwalks, stairways, and scaffolding. Neon lights, ominous smoke from dry ice, and colorful lasers enhanced the already awesome set.

Giant (and I mean giant) helium-filled balloon women even grew out of each side stage for "Honky Tonk Woman."

The problem was that Jagger and the rest of the band didn't utilize the entire stage, preferring to stay toward the center.

This isn't to say that the 46 year-old didn't retain the ability and stamina that was his trademark throughout his career.

And those clothes... As youthful, wild, and skin tight as ever.

Another problem was that they left out some vitals such as "Under My Thumb" and "Shattered" while doing several mediocre songs.

When the tour began on Aug. 31 in Philadelphia, "Shattered" was the third song on their line-up. During the song the entire system at Veterans Stadium went dead due to a blown generator.

The song has not been played since due to superstition.

Other than the lack of some of the Stones' biggest hits, the L.A. shows were incredible and the firework show afterward was spectacular — better than any 4th of July I've ever witnessed.

An opportunity to see a concert like this doesn't come around too often. This one took its time (eight years), but it was definitely worth the wait.

I know it's only rock n' roll but I like it.

'Twins' promises madcap misadventures of brothers

By PHIL MILLER
TM Staff Writer

An ambitious genetic experiment takes the wrong turn when identical twins who don't look anything alike are separated at birth.

Years later, the unlikely siblings Julius (Arnold Schwarzenegger) a high class, educated, but sheltered, giant with a big heart and Vincent (Danny DeVito) a pint sized hustler with an insatiable lust for women and money meet.

With girlfriends in tow and a human on their trail they set off on wild, cross-country misadventure to find their mother — but instead they find out about themselves.

This is reminiscent of "Rain Man" because two brothers finally meet and are puzzled about their relationship with each other.

This movie is really outstanding because the story, characters and energy were there.

It is entertaining.

Falcon defense sinks Vikings; host Pasadena City Saturday

By CHARLIE WALDORF
TM Staff Writer

The Defense is back. Cerritos College's defense didn't allow a touchdown against the high powered offense of the Vikings from Long Beach City, resulting in a 21-3 Falcon victory.

The Falcons are now 4-3-1 overall, and 3-3 in the Mission Conference and 1-0 in the North Division.

Cerritos hosts Pasadena City College in a 7 p.m. matchup Saturday.

Long Beach City, the leading rushing team in the Mission Conference, averaging 251 yards a game, was held to just 179 yards by the ferocious Falcon defense.

The defense held LBCC to 293 total yards, well below their 366 yard average.

The victory over Mission Conference rival Long Beach City, spoiled the Viking's Homecoming.

Cerritos' first opportunity to get onto the scoreboard came during their first possession of the game, when a 25 yard punt return by standout return-man Rico Smith put the ball at the Viking 26 yard line.

Three plays later, D. J. Barker missed a 40 yard field goal and the opportunity to give the Falcons the early lead.

Cerritos got on the board the next time they had the ball after a Long Beach miscue.

Linebacker Steve Hayes recovered a fumbled snap at Long Beach 42 yard line, giving the Falcons the ball in good field position.

The Falcon offense couldn't do anything with it, and on a fourth and 12 at the 34-yard line, the punting unit came out onto the field.

But before Long Beach could suspect anything, Head Coach Frank Mazzotta pulled a gadget play out of his hat.

Carl Lopez took the snap in punt formation and threw to a wide open Marlin Haynes, who raced down to the three yard line.

One play later, Tyrone Vickers ran up the middle for the touchdown.

D.J. Barker's point after was good, giving the Falcons a 7-0 lead.

The Vikings' only points of the game came on their next possession, a 36 yard field goal, making it 7-3 Cerritos as the first quarter expired.

For the second game in a row, Smith performed his magic with another electrifying return. Smith caught the ball at the Cerritos 44, went right and saw nothing, so he reversed field back to the 25 where he seemed to be stopped for a loss.

After picking up a few blocks, he turned upfield and ran by everyone, returning the punt 56 yards for the touchdown.

Smith now has three punt returns for touchdowns this season, which is a new school record.

Long Beach then countered Mazzotta's gadget play with one of their own.

Viking quarterback Steven Jones pitched the ball to running back Corey Sylve, but Sylve pulled up and threw a 36 yard pass to Oscar Ford at the Falcon 3.

Defensive back Darryl Hamilton appeared to come down with the pass, but Ford stripped the ball from his hands giving Long Beach a first and goal.

Defensive end Matt Plasch then recovered the second Viking mishandled snap of the game at the Falcon 3, taking the air out of the Vikings' sail.

Peter Montera relieved starting quarterback Sean McConnell with just over five minutes left in the third quarter, but was ineffective.

Linebacker Tom Furey recovered the third Vikings' fumble of the night, giving Cerritos the ball at their own 44 yard line.

Running backs Vickers and Victor Matos moved the ball down to the Long Beach 23, but the drive stalled when Montera threw two incompletions and a completed pass for a loss of one, setting up a fourth and 13.

An incomplete pass turned the ball over to Long Beach. McConnell came back into the game in the fourth quarter.

The final points of the game for the Falcons came on a 13 play 70 yard drive.

On a fourth and 24 from the 29, McConnell found an open Marcus Tyrone for the clincher.

Shawn Jones had a 59 yard touchdown called back because of a clipping penalty.

Kickers need win to clinch

By CHARLIE WALDORF
TM Staff Writer

The Falcon soccer team is in desperate need of victories in their next two games if they wish to make it into the regional playoffs.

Cerritos can clinch a second place conference finish and a good shot at making the playoffs tomorrow with a victory at third place College of the Desert.

The Falcons are 1-1 versus the Roadrunners this year. Last Friday, Cerritos came from behind and tied Mount San Antonio College 2-2.

The Falcons fell behind early against the Mounties 2-0 before Voltaire Menenez scored both Falcon goals to achieve the tie.

"We aren't the type of team that rebounds well when we fall behind. I was a little surprised that we went at them as hard as we did. McSAC was content with their two goals and dropped back to play defensively the second half," said Head Coach Bob Flores.
