

FLIGHT OF THE MEDFLY ENDS TONIGHT WHEN SPRAY HITS CAMPUS AT 9

By JEFFREY OCHOA
TM Editor-in-Chief

Bring your car covers and plan to stay inside classrooms tonight.

Aerial spraying of the Mediterranean Fruit Fly will begin at 9, and cover the entire campus.

The little varmint reportedly has been discovered right across the street from the campus.

Cerritos College was notified Tuesday morning that the California Department of Food and Agriculture will attempt to rid the region of the pesky fruit fly.

Night classes will not be interrupted, but staying indoors to avoid direct contact is advised.

The CDFA suggests hosing off cars in the morning to protect certain high-luster finishes.

A request has been made to hold off spraying until after 11 p.m. The CDFA said they will consider the request, but warned the campus to be prepared to have the spraying occur during the time scheduled.

The malathion being used in the spraying is considered the least hazardous.

Only 2.4 ounces of the insecticide will be used along with 9.6 ounces of a fly bait per surface acre. The CDFA advises vehicles being put into garages or covered to prevent contact with the bait droplets.

If you come in contact with the spray, soap and water will wash it right off.

According to CDFA, the mixture will not harm infants, children, pregnant women or the elderly with chronic illnesses.

If fruit or vegetables are being grown in the back yard, all that needs to be done is a little rinsing.

The covering of outdoor fish ponds is recommended since fish are very susceptible to any change in the chemical makeup of their environment.

Uncover the fish pond immediately after to avoid suffocation, officials warn.

Sanchez ousts Steenhoek by 11

BEST IN COUNTRY

Recount confirms seat in rare incumbent loss

By MARK HEUSTIS
TM Editor Emeritus

The first Board of Trustee challenger to be elected over an incumbent in 15 years kicked off his tenure by missing his first meeting.

Rick D. Sanchez, who ousted two-term veteran Dr. Ada Steenhoek by 11 votes, posted the second closest victory in the history of the Board.

The controversial win was proven through a recount, funded by constituents of Steenhoek.

A 16 vote margin was reduced by five when the recount, which cost the Steenhoek camp over $2,000, came in just in time to allow the seating of the newest member.

Incumbent Mark Durant and appointed incumbent Joseph Stits were sworn in for four year terms at the Dec. 5 meeting, while appointed incumbent John Moore was ensconced to fill in the remaining two years of a term.

Dr. Curtis Paxman, the last Board incumbent to be beaten, lost by a record setting 8 votes in what has been described as a "hard feelings" election. Winner Lou Banas ended 18 years of consecutive terms by Paxman in 1975.

Former Board of Trustee Vice President Katie Nordbak was unanimously elected president at the meeting.

Ruth Banda captured the vice president spot with secretary going to John Moore.

Board President Nordbak stated she would take a "proactive role rather than a reactive role," regarding Board policy.

She also expressed concerns about the manner in which purchasing orders are being handled.

The results from the November Board election at first indicated Steenhoek as the winner over Sanchez. But final tallies of absentee and mutilated ballots, which had to be hand counted, revealed a 16 vote win for Sanchez.

This was later adjusted to 11 by the recount, without changing the final outcome.

According to Steenhoek, "I was working 20 hours a day and sleeping four (starting a business) so I didn't campaign like I should have."

Sanchez, a 49 year old voca-

RICK SANCHEZ

tional administrator from Downey, spent an estimated $5,000 on his campaign. He believes his success came from a lot of hard work, attending coffee hours and canvassing Norwalk neighborhoods.

It will also be closed New Year's Day, reopening Jan. 2.

Campus weekly newspaper returns to Wednesday publication date; to broaden coverage

The college newspaper is going back to a Wednesday publication date.

Last semester it changed to Thursday delivery so Tuesday night Board of Trustee meetings and Wednesday afternoon Student Senate sessions could be given more timely coverage.

However, editors say they want to make sure they catch the Wednesday day and evening readership.

With lighter Thursday afternoon traffic, and Friday night classes, several students don't get around to the paper until Monday, they said.

The Talon Marks was named third best large college tab in Southern California by the Journalism Association of Community Colleges (JACC) at Ventura Saturday where the staff picked up 11 awards.

The paper has been lauded as the only college paper in the country that alternates a tabloid format and a so-called broadsheet (standard size) edition on a weekly schedule.

One observer said "The tab/ full size switcheroo is a unique way to get students experience with both formats."

Along with Wings magazine, the newspaper is produced on desktop campus, and more comprehensive reporting of the entire college community — with special emphasis on evening students —

Talon Marks takes third, staff wins 11 awards at conference

editing and publishing typesetting and graphics equipment in the Journalism lab by communications and journalism students.

More in-depth coverage of the will be focused on next semester, according to the Editorial Board.

The newspaper can be contacted via campus mail, by phone Ext. 376, or by dropping by the newsroom and editorial offices in the Arts and Craft Building, Room 42.

Another first is a 5:30-7 desktop publication production lab class held on Mondays and Tuesdays. Students interested in joining the staff for evening production should contact editors or the advisor in AC-42.

A First Place in published feature story went to Shelly Lester and Justin Velez in JACC mail-in competition for a story on Rodney Allen Rippey. Velez also won Honorable Mentions with a feature on the Emeritos College and an editorial on Black History.

Lisa Puch took a fourth in on-the-spot feature writing. Juan Pivaral was fourth in cartoons.

Rich DeLaby won fifth for layout.

Juan Ocampo photos placed second in features and fourth in sports.

The newspaper got sixth for Best Use of Photos.

Next issue will be Jan. 24.

Dear Santa: Can we talk...?

Dear Santa:

I saw you the other day at the grand opening of an auto parts store.

Are you feeling O.K.? You look like you've lost a lot of weight.

Is everything alright...financially speaking? Have you had to take on a second job passing out flyers just so you can afford Christmas?

Santa, I think you're one of those "men who love too much."

Really, you're being used.

All those kids send you the never-ending list asking for Barbie's poodle salon and G.I. Joe's remote control Jeep with working headlights.

I hate to be the one to say this...but...WAKE UP!!!

They leave you a cookie or two, a glass of milk, and they're home free.

Besides, you're getting up in years and shouldn't eat that stuff.

What are you now, 148?

After all the years of hard work, giving to people all over the world, never asking for anything in return, what do you get?

Praise...once a year.

Furthermore, I think you need a good public relations team...or a lawyer.

Have you seen all the phonies out there?

Magazines.

Billboards.

Commercials.

They are using your good name, your image...your suit, to sell anything from booze to batteries, cereal to stereos.

You are being pranced on by multitudes of merry-makers.

Maybe you should hold a press conference and demand some respect from the gimmee generation.

No that's not like you...

You're too much of a saint, Nick.

Where has all the time...

How time has flown!
We're already registering for next semester.
Christmas is everywhere.
And finals start Dec. 15—about one week from tomorrow.

It's been fun, but it hasn't been fun all the time.

To be sure, a lot of things have been going on around campus—from upset Board members to frustrated football fans. The gunsmoke has cleared from Board chambers, and Student Government has kept everything fairly quiet and under wraps, although there have been some interesting goings-on behind the scenes.

...The semester has not been as electrifying or as exciting as previous periods, but time passes.

Time to wrap things up.
And try again next year.
Of course, we all could probably help take any threatening ho-hum of Spring if we'd maybe get more involved.

Interact more.
Grades might even be better if the books were hit a little harder.

It's easy to become indifferent, apathetic, lackadaisical.

Fact is, most of us have been sneaked up on.

The semester is over.

The year is gone.

And a new year is waiting in the mi(d)st...

Happy Holidays.

And moooo...

MILLER TIME

The fine art of making the most of movies

By Phil Miller
TM Staff Writer

Movies, movies, movies.
Boy, oh boy, do I like going to the movies.

Know what I mean?

Before the feature starts, I'll get a popcorn and a soft drink. Then I'll either read my textbook, or something like, say, "Batman."

Every now and then I will run into friends in line at the movies. Naturally I ask if they're seeing the same picture or a different one.

Sometimes I'll even invite friends to go with me, and let them pick the feature.

...As soon as the picture gets started, I'll leave this world, and enter another place and time for a few hours.

...Watching films in a multi theatre complex is great.

If one turns out to be lousy, I'll go see another one just to make up for it.

Afterwards I go home and write what I honestly thought about the movie.

When I go to this one theatre, there is an usher who keeps saying, "You must really enjoy watching movies, to come here so often."

There was this one time when another usher said, "That sports coat and dark purple pants look great together."

...Wonder why he said that?

Movies I've seen include, "Black Rain," "Dad," "Back to the Future Part 2," "Harlem Nights," and "Romero."

When the movie ends, ushers come in and clean up for the next set of people coming in...

And so it goes.

If you haven't been going to the movies, you're missing out on some great adventures, dramas, comedies, suspense, animation, mysteries and horror pictures.

You might even like some of them.

If you don't like paying $6 or $7 just for a ticket, check out reduced rate Twilight showings at your major theatres like Pacific, United Artists, and Mann's.

There are discount theatres that charge between $1 to $2 for all seats and times.

See a movie.

It'll probably make you feel better.

And...there's no telling who you might run into.

Or what they might say.

IN REVIEW

'Doll's House' — Come on in

By Louise Martin

The doll is in the house, but the house is not filled.

However, there is still one weekend left to see Henrik Ibsen's "The Doll's House" at Burnight Studio Theater.

This classic piece has been brought to life by a talented cast of actors under the direction of Kevin Hoggard.

The story is set in 1879 in the Helmer residence.

The central focus is on Nora Helmer, played by Stacy Ann Brewer, and her struggle to establish her own identity after having played the part of a doll all of her life.

At one point in the play, Nora states to her husband Torvald, played by Michael Garcia, "I've been your doll-wife here, just as at home I was papa's doll-child. And in turn, the children have been my dolls."

This theme is inherent throughout the show, accentuated by supporting characters who add to Nora's mounting inner turmoil.

For being so young to play a part of a lady with three children,

Stacy Brewer's portrayal of Nora was well done and very consistent.

She had some great moments where Nora's internal agony was clearly seen.

Stacy's real life fiance, Michael Garcia, played the part of Torvald Helmer, her husband.

He also had some good moments where his character became real for the audience.

In any great classic, there is some obstacle or element of conflict which must be dealt with and then resolved.

In this play, the conflict was the character Krogstad, played by James Kohatsu.

With one letter he could have ruined Nora's life if he so chose. Kohatsu had a wonderful foreboding stage presence from the moment he walked on stage.

His interpretation of Krogstad was very real and believable.

Other notable performances included Simona Potter's Mrs. Linde. Her portrayal of this widowed lady was very consistent and believable.

Joseph Harris also played a very good Dr. Rank.

according to English instructor George Jaeger, just such a course is being offered in the Spring of 1990.

Any student who owns or has access to an IBM, Macintosh, or other brand of personal computer equipped with a modem can take advantage of the Freshman Composition class.

First of its kind

Jaeger believes this is the first program of its kind to be offered in a California Community College.

Says Jaeger, "You don't have to sit on the freeway an hour to come to class from work. You don't have to be in class at 7 a.m. or p.m." He also notes that, "My students can have access to me 365 days a year 24 hours a day."

The program was tested with a handful of students in the Summer of 1988 in an experimental writing class.

The positive experience gleaned prompted Jaeger to change the intent of his Spring '89 Sabbatical to develop the system.

Come on compute

Students attending Jaeger's

The other supporting characters included Jacquelyn Morgenthauer as Helene, and Vickie Resurreccion as Anne Marie.

In addition, three children were cast including Natalie Kammerzell as Emmy, Elizabeth Hoggard as Elizabeth, and Stacy Kammerzell as Katharine.

All were delightful.

Overall, the play flowed smoothly and was easily understood.

However, there were times when the sub-text behind the relationships between the characters was not made clear.

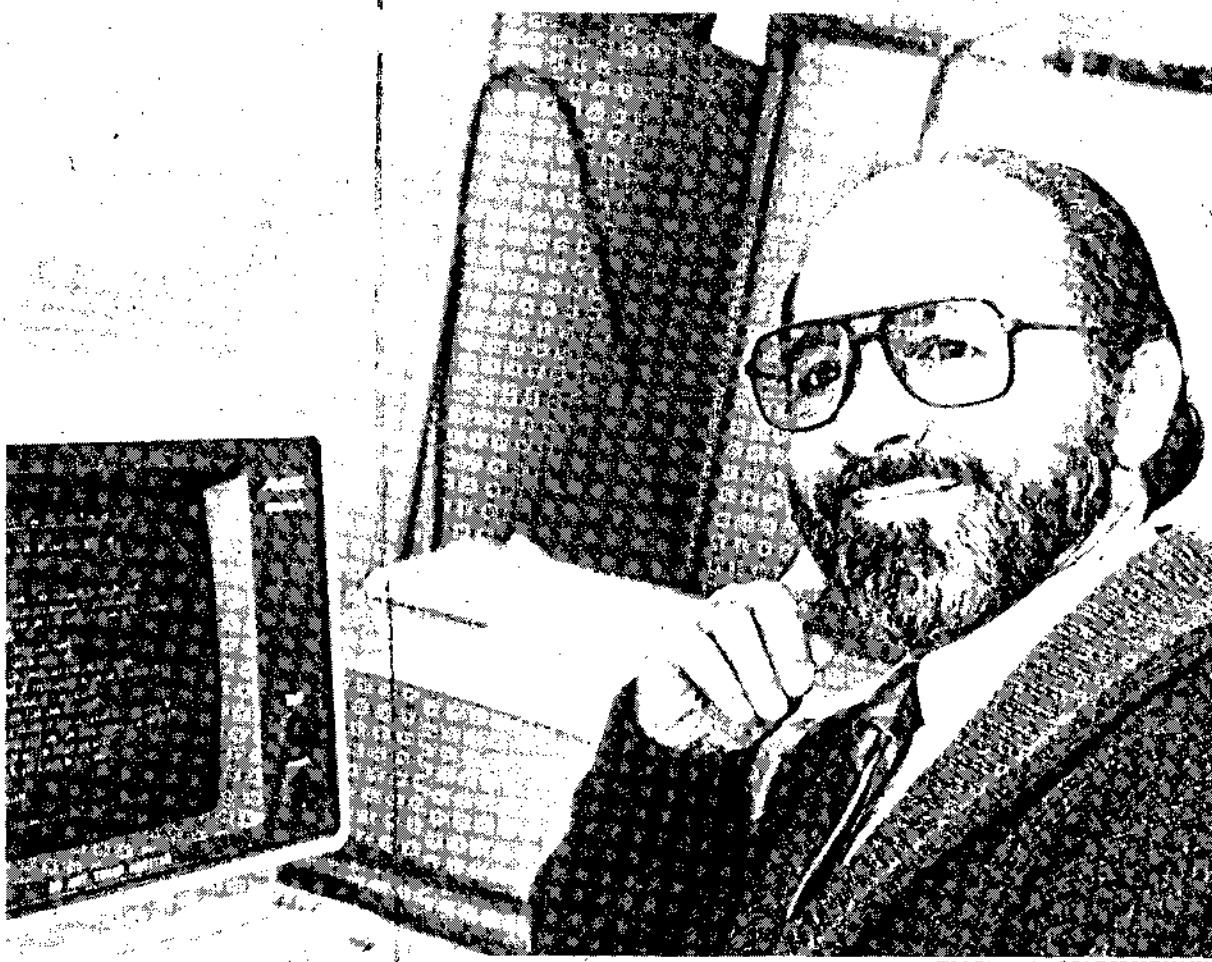

It was hard to decipher what each character meant to each other at times.

But, the basic story was made clear though.

The set design was pleasant enough as were the costumes for the period.

If you haven't had the opportunity to see the Ibsen classic, I recommend going.

Final performances are Tonight, Thursday Dec. 7, through Saturday.

JAEGER TEACHES COMP WITH TECHNOLOGY

Computer class takes commute out of taking new English class

By MARK HEUSTIS
TM Editor Emeritus

You attend class whenever you please, and send and receive assignments over the telephone.

Lectures and exercises tailored to meet your own needs are also sent via computer phone connections.

This may seem like the future of college instruction revealed, but classes this semester have the option of sending assignments by computer, but must still attend classes.

English I student Anthony Oda was able to take 18 units because of "distance learning."

"It's a great system. I can get my assignments and information without leaving my home," said Oda.

He is also taking a computerized Math lab here on campus.

More interaction with the instructor during the learning process is one of the reasons Kim Hensley opted for computerized learning.

"It's a lot easier to get two computers together than two people."

She works, and uses her office computer to send and receive assignments, lectures and discussion.

Big time saver

"I have more opportunity to turn in preliminary outlines, and don't lose a whole day waiting for class meetings," says Hensley.

The myth that a computer depersonalizes contact is quickly being shattered by veteran computer communicator Jaeger, who claims to be able to tell the mood of the person he is telecommunicating with.

According to Jaeger, "I've met people across the United States, and hold them as close friends, without having met them face to face."

Although dissenters say such is unfair because not everyone can afford a computer, the same objections were raised in the '50s when educators were considering television courses.

TV skeptics silenced

Courses via television have not only caught on, but hold a respected place in most institutions of higher learning.

Attempting to serve the needs of the community is a basic Cerritos goal, and Jaeger hopes to do so better by allowing people who can't make it to class three times a week to "attend" college.

Students who qualify for English I next semester and have access to a computer and a modem can ride the wave of the future by signing up. Only three class meetings need to be attended during the 18-week semester.

With the role of computers increasing, it seems likely that Jaeger's vision of alternative education can only grow and spread from the cutting edge of Cerritos College.

LISA-AT-LARGE

Studying, shopping takes lots of concentration

Lurking dangerously ahead are dreaded finals, but what troubles our minds the most these days?

Try Christmas shopping.

Acing an exam is practically out of mind.

Minding the right present for the right person is the thing.

What to get for a hard-to-buy-for overrides what to study for.

Suddenly the list grows from immediate family and close friends to take in an entourage of acquaintances and familiar faces.

Then, there's always the one you didn't include on your list—until you found out they had you on their list.

It's almost as hard as studying for an exam.

...I mean the brain strain and all.

After all, studying for a shopping list is not all that much different than hitting the books.

Either one will put you to the test, so to speak.

Thank goodness, it's the thought that counts.

Or, is that the thinking that counts?

New Student Center wing expected to be ready for use first of Spring semester

By RICHARD DE LABY
TM Associate Editor

The Student Activities wing of the budding Student Center Complex will be ready for student use at the start of next semester.

The $716K project, paid for by the ASCC, district and EOPS, is a two part plan designed to provide a student activities center of 3269 square feet for immediate use, and to centralize student services.

According to Associate Dean of Student Activities Phil Houseman, "The new center will allow us to offer services and activities on a full time basis.

"In addition to it being a central meeting place for students, there will be educational and cultural programs ranging from movies to lectures."

Houseman also remarked that there will be full time supervision to help eliminate potential disciplinary problems.

Originally scheduled to open up the middle of this semester, moving in was postponed by the relocation of the student affairs offices.

This is the first of several similar plans to actually be implemented after 20 years of discussion, with cost and expediency being cited as reasons for acceptance.

ASCC presidents have used it as a platform, and in 1980 and 1985, State Accreditation Teams recommended that the college should "provide a suitable lounge to meet current and future needs."

said Phil Houseman, associate dean of student activities.

The top first, second and third canned collectors will each be awarded a plaque at tomorrow's Fall Awards Banquet.

Clubs vying for the top donations are Alpha Gamma Sigma-Honor Society, AHORA, Alpha Phi Beta Fraternity, Beta Theta Gamma/Re-Entry Club, Chinese Club, Kappa Psi Theta Sorority, Mu Omega Alpha/Medical Assistants, Phi Beta Lambda/Business Club, Filipino Club, Phi Rho Pi/Speech Club and Sigma Phi Fraternity.

According to Houseman, after the Dec. 15 deadline, food items collected will be given to the needy families in the Cerritos College district.

FIRST CREDIT OF CALIFORNIA TAKES CHANCE ON AMERICAN YOUTH

First Credit Corporation of Southern California has approved a new program to help the youth of American establish a line of credit with no co-signers, credit history or collateral required.

This program was brought to First Credit's attention through the efforts of Cristin Chapman (age 19). It took some hard selling on Ms. Chapman's part for First Credit to even entertain the notion that most young Americans, if given the chance, are just as creditworthy as their older counterparts.

Ms. Chapman showed that banks such as; the young American Bank of Denver, Colorado, are running very successful credit card programs for young Americans. The premise is simple: Credit is a fact of life and younger people need to learn how to use it responsibly.

A lot of mature people, when they receive their first credit card, go crazy because of no previous training. It is felt that a program like First Credit's, and others, could help curb this problem.

Any student with a good academic record and no history of substance abuse can receive a "First Credit" credit card with a $250 credit limit. Quotes Ms. Chapman, "It's better to learn with a $250 limit now than later on in life when thousands of dollars worth of credit can be obtained and misused."

To receive your application for "The First Credit" card simply call: 1-800-777-0586.
